HARRY IN A CAR WINDOW

This protograph of Thaw shows the Matteawan fugitive as he likes to smile as the train speeds him on his journey through New Hampshire. He frequently responds to cheers by a sweeping bow out of the window.

'September Morn' Pose of Actress Costs $50 Fine

HARRISBURG, Pa., Sept. 17.—Miss Annie Ideal, an actress, who posed as "September Morn" in the waters of the Susquehanna River recently, was fined $50 by Mayor Royal. An ordinance defined her action as "disorderly practice and offending the morals of the community."

PLANNED TO KILL SCHMIDT

NEW YORK, Sept. 17.—Is Hans Schmidt, the forger, counterfeiter and murderer, now held in the Tombs, the same Hans Schmidt who was ordained to the priesthood in Germany five or six years ago, or is the prisoner here an impostor who in some way came into possession of the credentials of the real Father Hans Schmidt?

This is the question that the police and Catholic clergy today are asking, and to find an answer to the question the photographs and a complete description of the confessed slayer have been sent to Germany to see if they tally with those of the real priest.

Belief was expressed here today that the real Father Schmidt in some way came to his death in Germany, and that the prisoner here seized his papers and proceeded to use them to further his criminal ends.

Inspector Faurot's investigation disclosed what he considers might have been a motive for the murder of Anna Aumuller. In the presence of a doctor, about a month ago, the girl threatened to kill Schmidt, according to a statement made by the physician to the inspector. When Schmidt called on his physician he was in civilian clothes.

Many young married couples living in the vicinity of St. Joseph's Church were in a quandary last night concerning the legality of their marriages, which had been performed by Schmidt. Another priest of the church had said that many such marriages had been discovered

WILLIAMS' CHAUFFEUR CONFESSES

Atherton N. Hunt of Braintree, with an office at No. 84 State street, and Emery Gildo of Brookline were today appointed administrators of the muddled estate of George Edward Williams.

The appointment was made by Judge James H. Flint in the Norfolk Probate Court in Quincy. The amount of bonds was not fixed. Mr. Hunt was named in Williams' will as co-executor with the widow, Mrs. Sarah E. Williams, who was advised by counsel not to serve owing to the involved condition of her husband's affairs and the manner in which her dower rights were jeopardized.

Glimpses of the dual life of Williams, insurance man, forger and all-round swindler, as obtained by Max C. Brasel, one of his two chauffeurs, are made public today by the AMERICAN for the first time.

Brasel lives at No. 405 Elm street, East Braintree. He worked for Williams the last year of the latter's life. As driver of the $6,000 limousine, at a wage of $25, with liberal tips, Brasel had opportunity to see how shrewdly Williams enjoyed and concealed his remarkable personality.

Brasel Tells His Story.

Here is Brasel's story:

"I drove Mr. Williams to Boston from Braintree every day. On our way we would call for Emma and Carrie Wellington at their Milton home. We would drop Carrie at the office of a doctor on Newbury street, and I would leave Williams and Emma at the insurance office, No. 111 Devonshire street.

"I carried Williams and Emma Wellington to Young's, the Parker House and the Touraine, and sometimes her sister

Peters Decides to Stay in Congress

WASHINGTON, Sept. 17.—"Washington is good enough for me," said Representative Peters of Massachusetts today, when asked if he would accept an appointment to the Philippine Commission. It is said President Wilson is considering Peters for appointment to the commission, but his statement today indicates he will run for a fifth term in Congress.

Clams Dug in Lynn Make Boy Very Ill

From the effect of eating clams dug on the Lynn marshes, Spencer MacNair, thirteen, of No. 37 Station street, Lynn, was taken suddenly ill today with blood-poisoning and rushed to the Union Hospital, where he was placed on the dangerous list.

Fake Death Notice Frightens Barber

Gives Up Girl; Thinks Another Suitor Seeks His Life.

BROCKTON, Sept. 17.—A hint is good enough for Manuel Rankin of this town, who has resigned his job in Boston and given up his girl because of a fake obituary notice sent through the mails.

"Your son has been killed in a fight," was the message received on a postal card by George Rankin, Manuel's father, of No. 64 Bay street, Boston, yesterday.

Manuel had been working in a Washington street barber shop and his father visited this place first to secure his son's address. What was his surprise to see Manuel placidly lathering a customer.

"What does it mean?" asked his father.

"It means that my life is in danger. I have been going around with a girl, and I have cut out a certain party. He has made threats against me. Yesterday he must have intended to kill me and mailed this card. Then he couldn't find me or something which explains why I am alive today."

West Somerville Girl Hit by Train

While on an errand for her mother before school today, Lillian O'Neil, twelve, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Cornelius O'Neil of No. 35A Kingston street, West Somerville, was struck and probably fatally injured by a Boston & Maine Railroad train bound for Northampton. The accident happened near the Thorndike street subway. Lillian had been to Davis square store and had taken a short cut home over the railroad tracks. Parents say this practice of using the tracks by children should be discouraged by the police and railroad authorities.

Strikers Tying Up English Railroads

BIRMINGHAM, Eng., Sept. 17.—The strike of railroad employes which extended here from Dublin and Liverpool is spreading. This afternoon 2,000 men in the suburban service joined the strike. Railroad traffic here is becoming paralyzed. Strike leaders say that before the beginning of next week rail traffic over the greater part of England will be tied up.

Vanderbilt Sees Films by Mistake

ROCHESTER, N. Y., Sept. 17.—Reginald C. Vanderbilt got into a moving picture show by mistake, after he gave a dinner to C. H. Wilson, Miss Ellen Rasmussen and "Count" B. T. S. Gregory of England. The entire party got inside the film house while going to see a melodrama, for which the "Count" had tickets.

Man Struck by Car May Die.

While crossing Stoughton street, Dorchester, near Uphams Corner today, Daniel M. Hellaran of No. 44 Greenwich place, Dorchester, was struck by an inward-bound elevated car, receiving a fracture of the skull and a broken collarbone. He was taken to the City Hospital and his name placed on the dangerous list.

BELIEVE FUGITIVE WILL GET INSANITY TRIAL IN PITTSBURGH

CONCORD, N. H., Sept. 17.—Harry Thaw is nearer his mother's home in Pittsburgh today than at any time since the night he shot Stanford White.

For the first time, the Thaw counsel have taken what the best legal opinion says is the correct step.

This means that Thaw will, in all probability, be escorted to Pittsburgh by some United States marshal. In his home town Thaw will get a jury trial to decide the question of his sanity. This he has been seeking to do for six years.

BELIEVE JEROME HAS LOST BY BLUNDER.

Jerome, though a bulldog in pursuit, is believed to have blundered in the last act in the Thaw case. It is generally considered that there is no crime in an insane person escaping from an asylum, but it would probably follow then, if Thaw were indicted for conspiracy to escape, that the indictment would not hold.

Thaw is not a criminal, having been acquitted by a jury by reason of insanity. When persons are confined in asylums because they were acquitted by a jury by reason of insanity, if they regain their reason they are entitled to a trial to show it.

And so far as learned there is no

SHARKS ENDANGER FISHERMEN.

Fishermen arriving at T Wharf today from the South Channel fishing grounds on George's Banks report that sharks are numerous and voracious to a degree that makes fishing dangerous. The monsters hurl themselves at the sides of the frail dories and nearly capsize them.

AUTOIST ALLEGED TO HAVE RUN OVER BOY FINED $5

indictment, even in this case for conspiracy.

Only Affidavit Attached.

It is understood that the official papers asking for extradition have attached to them only an affidavit of the District Attorney of the county in which Matteawan is, setting forth that he believes that there was a conspiracy to escape, and the evidence by which he intends to obtain an indictment.

It is elementary law that a warrant is not sufficient for extradition unless it be a bench warrant based on an indictment.

Judge Aldrich apparently had carefully examined the law and he practically gave his decision after great industry and investigation.

He said that, if Mr. Jerome had found any law in the books authorizing the extradition of an insane person for escaping, he had found something that the judge was unable to discover.

Judge Aldrich is a New Hampshire man, living many years in Littleton and much respected for his attainments. Even his unofficial statement in open court is certain to have a great effect on the Governor and the Attorney-General of New Hampshire, who is to advise the Governor. And it is extremely unlikely, unless Jerome produces precedents which are ironclad—and which so far no one has been able to find—that the Attorney-General will advise the Governor that Judge Aldrich was wrong in his intimation.

May Expect Release on Bail.

In addition to this, Thaw, having got into the United States court and having obtained what is almost an official intimation that the law is not against him, even if the Governor should order his extradition, a resumption of the habeas corpus before Judge Aldrich would probably bring an opposite decision, and, if it would not, at least an appeal to the Supreme Court of the United States could be taken and, as the offence is one not involving a great crime and no moral turpitude, Thaw will undoubtedly be released on bail.

Jerome has received a setback which can only be wiped away by a decision of the Supreme Court of the United States, which is some years away.

LAWYERS CONFIDENT AS THAW IS TAKEN OFF TO CONCORD FOR HEARING

CONCORD, N. H., Sept. 17.—Flushed with their Federal Court victory, the lawyers for Harry K. Thaw today saw their client's freedom more assured than at any time since they assumed the case.

They beheld Thaw taken to Concord, to await the extradition hearing, with utmost confidence that they have a firm grip on the situation and that Thaw will eventually come before a New Hampshire jury for a verdict as to his sanity.

"We feel sure that Harry will get a jury trial," said Merrill Shurtleff of Lancaster, one of the Thaw counsel.

The jubilation of the Thaw camp was all the more marked on account of the checkmating of Jerome. Popular opinion here today was that Jerome suffered a severe setback at the federal hearing. He not only lost his motion to have the habeas corpus writ vacated, but he was sharply rebuked in open court by Judge Aldrich for unprofessional language.

Jerome, beaten in the Federal Court by the trump card of his opponents, has withdrawn with his assistants, Sheriff Hornbeck of Dutchess County, N. Y., and Deputy Attorney General Franklin Kennedy, to New York. He will return next Tuesday, the day on which Governor Felker will listen to the New Yorkers' demand for Thaw's extradition, and to Thaw's arguments against the action.

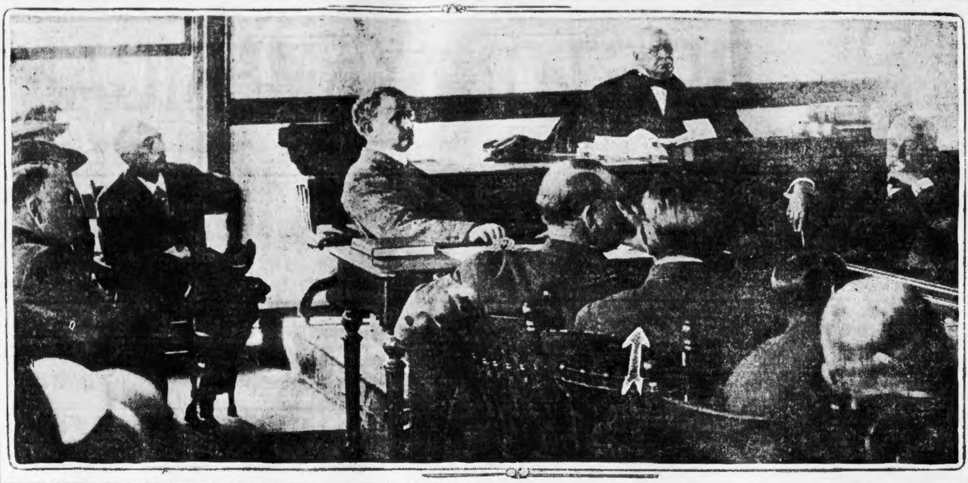
So, too, have the Thaw army of barristers withdrawn, satisfied with their success in Littleton, and now waiting for the next move, which will come with the Governor's hearing. Only ex-Governor Stone remains on guard in Littleton watching out lest Jerome should return with some unexpected move.

It is, however, conceded that with the decision to put over the hearing on the United States writ of habeas corpus, Thaw will be absolutely undisturbed by any authorities until he chooses to reopen the case himself.

Then too, should the extradition proceedings on Tuesday go against him, he still has recourse to the Federal Courts, and is one step nearer bringing it to the Supreme Court of the United States, where his counsel have long desired to get an entering wedge. It is predicted that New York State will never see Thaw until the Supreme Court has acted on the question, and that even then the ruling of that body may be adverse to the State.

COURT SCENE WHERE THAW WON FIRST VICTORY

Arrow indicates Thaw seated before Judge Aldrich in the cramped court room at Littleton, N. H., where the fates proved kind to him. Thaw is surrounded by a sea of attorneys, United States marshals and deputy sheriffs. This fine interior photograph was snapped while Jerome, who is not included in the picture's range, was making his plea to U. S. Judge Aldrich, shown on bench. Ex-Governor Stone, of Thaw's counsel, is at extreme right.



EVELYN NESBIT

By LEO J. RABBETT

Cursed with the blessing of beauty,
  Damned with a haloing flame,
Out of the light and the country
  To the night and the city you came.

To the city of laughter and music,
  The city of riot and song,
Where lust is master of revels
  And glittering nights are long.

You came with your maiden treasure,
  The vultures were quick to see;
The snares they set were golden,
  And red with treachery.

The sport of desire they made you;
  The slave of their passion's sway;
One came to redeem your loveliness,
  One came to avenge and slay!

You quaffed the cup of bitterness,
  You sounded the depths of shame;
No pity took on your pitifulness
  Who sanctified Magdalen's name.

Out of the chaos you struggled
  Into the new-born day;
Woman and martyr and mother,
  You go the perfect way.

More than a plaything, a puppet,
  A pawn in the hands of men;
You came from the font of the Mighty,
  You live in His glory again.

THAW IS TAKEN TO CONCORD FOR EXTRADITION HEARING

LITTLETON, N. H., Sept. 17.—Harry Thaw left this town for Concord today, after being here twenty-three hours, so jubilant that everything was rosy to him.

From Harry's viewpoint there was nothing to mar a perfect day. Even the weather was of that "made-to-order" brand, which is so often served in the New Hampshire mountain region in the Fall.

There were crowds to give Harry the thrills which act like wine upon him.

Jerome, his dreaded Nemesis, had retired from the scene, checkmated for the present, at least.

The protecting arm of the United States was thrown about him. The extradition hearing had been put off until next Tuesday. His lawyers had talked more and more confidently, and Harry's cup of happiness was so full it could not stand a jar.

From the time that Judge Aldrich yesterday gave his decision that the habeas corpus writ be suspended, Harry's spirits had risen. He was frankly gleeful over the defeat of Jerome, more so than any time since his arch enemy—as Thaw regards him—was arrested for poker playing up in Coaticook.

5,000 Cheer Fugitive.

Harry emerged from the little court room fairly bursting with satisfaction. Five thousand people, jammed in front of the National Bank building, where the court was held, cheered and applauded him. It was exhilirating to the Matteawan fugitive.

"Good for you, Harry Thaw," shouted some of the crowd. "They'll never get you back to Matteawan. You'll go free, Harry!"

Harry believed it and the evident sympathy of the spectators cheered him. He was stepping high, as they say, when he arrived back at the Thayer House. He ate a hearty supper. In the evening he strolled down into the hotel parlor and played the piano for the crowd.

"Sing something, Harry," he was asked.

Harry smiled courteously—for he has fine manners—and said:

"I play a little, but my singing is terrible."

Plays Piano in Hotel Parlor.

He played by note—and played well—from what sheet music the hotel had. In good season he went to bed. Marshal Nute and Sheriff Drew kept unobtrusive guard.

The sheriff of Coos County now has an additional title. He is really a "keeper-sheriff," since Judge Aldrich designated him joint-keeper of Thaw with Marshal Nute.

Harry likes this arrangement. He approves of both the marshal and the sheriff.

Up in good season today, Harry ate well again, then played the piano for a while, opened his mail and packed his grip. He received about a bushel of letters. Two-thirds of them were addressed in feminine handwriting. Harry did not open all. He did not have time. But he packed all away in his grip, to read at his leisure.

Woman Sends Him Flowers.

He received by express from Pittsburgh a huge bouquet. It was a gift from some Pittsburgh woman, who enclosed a note for him to be of good cheer, that he soon would be free. Harry was greatly pleased with this thoughtful token.

It was said that Marshal Nute would not go to Concord with Harry on account of court duties here, but the marshal arranged matters so he could go, at which Harry was gratified.

Reservations were made ahead for rooms for the Thaw party at the Eagle Hotel in Concord, the hotel where New Hampshire politics has been made and unmade, the hotel of which Winston Churchill wrote in "Coniston," the hotel which has sheltered famous men of the Granite State for generations.

Fashionables and "Sneezers" There.

The 9:59 was the best train for the Concord trip. This gave the "natives" plenty of opportunity to assemble for Harry's departure. There was an additional gallery, too, of fashionable Summer folk from over Bethlehem and Sugar Hill way, people from Boston, New York and other cities.

The "Sneezers," as they call the hay-fever victims who flee to Bethlehem annually for relief at this time, braced up and drove over to Littleton in automobiles.

So it was a pretty cosmopolitan crowd which strung along from the Thayer House to the railroad station and which jammed the station platform to the last inch. There was regular New Hampshire farmers and society folk side by side. Hobble skirts were seen in plenty and Harry had one of the first real fashion reviews he has enjoyed since he went to the back door of Matteawan, a month ago, to "bring in the milk."

Poses for Pitcures.

Accompanying Harry to Concord were Marshal Nute, Sheriff Drew, Attorney Merrill Shurtliff and former Governor Stone of Pennsylvania, personal representative of the Thaw family.

On the way down to the station Harry stopped in a photograph studio for a few minutes and posed for pictures.

He was cheered and applauded from time to time on the way. He responded politely to all salutations. He joked with the reporters and his keepers continually, keeping up a running fire of chatter.

At the station Harry shook hands with as many of the crowd as could get to him. This was kept up until the train drew in.

At the last minute a middle-aged man, wearing overalls, broke through the jam, grasped Harry's hand and shook it heartily, saying:

"I want to shake hands with you, Mr. Thaw. You certainly have the sympathy of the people of Littleton. We all hope that you will come back here again. Goodby and God bless you!"

Harry squeezed his admirer's hand warmly and said: "Thank you, very much," and climbed aboard.

The train was crowded. The single parlor car on the express was ful, so Harry and his party went into the smoker. Harry took a window seat and sat smiling at the crowd.

The train rolled out at 10 o'clock on its run of four hours and ten minutes to Concord. It was scheduled to stop at Plymouth for dinner.

EX-SENATOR CHANDLER WRITES EDITORIAL ON THAW'S LEGAL STATUS

CONCORD, N. H., Sept. 17.—Former United States Senator William E. Chandler prints an editorial letter by himself in his newspaper, the Concord Monitor, in which he discusses "The Question in the Thaw Case," as follows:

> The United States Constitution says, Article 4, Section 2:
> "The citizens of each State shall be entitled to all privileges and immunities of citizens in the several States. A person charged in any State with treason, felony or other crime, who shall flee from justice, and be found in another State, shall on demand of the executive authority of the State from which he fled be delivered up, to be removed to the State having jurisdiction of the crime."
> Thaw killed a man in the State of New York, was tried therefore and acquitted on the ground of insanity and by the laws of New York was therefore committed to an asylum He escaped therefrom and fled to New Hampshire.

MAY GET THAW BACK TO CANADA IS LATEST PLAN

MONTREAL, Sept. 16.—N. K. LaFlamme, K. C., one of the former Thaw counsel, has announced that should the court decide that the immigration act is unconstitutional, it would be sufficient ground to work through the proper channels to obtain Thaw's return to Canada. This is interpreted to mean that an effort will be made on the part of Thaw's counsel to have Thaw returned to the Dominion once their contentions that the act is irregular is established.

The hearing of the details of the writ was postponed to 10:30 o'clock Thursday morning. This request was made by Gustave Lamothe, who has been retained as counsel in the case, acting with L. T. Marechal.

'Until Snow Flies' May Be Prophetic in Thaw Battle

LITTLETON, N. H., Sept. 17.—"Until snow flies," is now getting to be the general expression of opinion regarding Thaw's duration of liberty. Even Jerome has used it.

When Thaw was in Canada Attorney Greenshields, one of the Dominion lawyers for Thaw, said Harry would be there "until snow flies."

Jerome's final remark in his colloquy with Judge Aldrich was this:

"If the insanity issue is brought up in this court we certainly will be here until the snow flies."

Girl Asphyxiated While in Her Bath

Air Vitiated by Gas Heater Caused Her Death.

MANCHESTER, N. H., Sept. 17.—It became known today that Miss Dorothy M. Dillon of No. 100 Harrison street, a fifteen-year-old schoolgirl, was found dead in the bathroom of her home by her father, Dr. Richard H. Dillon.

Miss Dillon met death while taking her morning bath yesterday. She heated the water by a gas heater. All the windows were shut and the door shut and locked in the bathroom so that there was no change of air.

The flame from the gas stove evidently ate up the oxygen and deprived the girl of breathing material. This process occurred so gradually that she did not awaken to her peril until she was overcome and died in the bathtub of asphyxiation.

The girl had been dead an hour before her father and mother discovered her. Efforts to restore breathing by use of a pulmotor were fruitless.

WEDNESDAY, SEPT. 17

Love Story of Harry and Evelyn Thaw

CHAPTER XXI.

"And every tongue brings in a several tale. ("King Richard III.")

The metropolis fairly shrieked with the killing.

The law, having the slayer's person, pursued its ordinary course at first, with the routine of booking and arranging the prisoner.

But the news of the crime flew far and wide over the country.

The New York newspaper offices were whirls of excitement. There was a clatter all up and down Park Row. The "story" was "big stuff," as the editors and star reporters said.

Here was a man of international fame shot down in cold blood by another man of international notoriety and all on account of a pretty girl.

All the elements that go to make up a premier sensation were present. Reporters scurried around—for the hour was late—to get all possible details of the case from all possible angles.

The picture departments of the newspapers were turned upside down for photographs of White, Thaw and Evelyn and of Madison Square Garden. Lionel Lawrence and others connected with "Mam-zelle Champagne" were interviewed for descriptions of the shooting.

The obituary departments of the newspaper offices were combed for clippings relating to White and his architectural triumphs, to Thaw and his spectacular career, to Evelyn and her young life.

Family History Retold.

The Thaw family history was retold and endless speculation—all written with a careful eye to contempt of court and the libel law—was indulged in. It was all part of the big game of newspaper work, which was bent on furnishing millions of readers all items of this tremendous piece of news.

Up and down Broadway the shooting was the sole topic. Every actor and chorusite who had a chum in "Mam'zelle Champagne," hunted up that chum to get all the news of the actual shooting. In the "lobster palaces" along Broadway the tale was discussed over and over again.

Already whisperings were heard of the lives of both Thaw and White, whisperings which were to grow loud and louder as time went on.

White's long association with stage matters was recalled. The name of this person and of that was mentioned in connection with the great designer.

Thaw's life in New York was gone over again and again and different persons, who had come in contact with the dissolute young spendthrift at one point or another in his gaudy career, had his or her story to tell—if they chose.

Combined with all this riot of talk was hasty speculation upon the outcome of the case for Thaw. Already an opinion was shaping that either the "unwritten law" or insanity would be offered as a defence. It was allowed that the prosecution would simply have to submit brief evidence of the killing and then await the movements of the other.

Prominent Men Fled.

That Thaw would be extravagantly defended by all the legal talent that millions of wealth could buy was taken for granted.

In certain quarters the shooting had peculiar results. Some close associates of Thaw and White made hasty plans to leave the city. They carried out these plans promptly. They did not wish either to be interviewed by the myriad of reporters, or to be called upon to testify. Without mentioning names the newspapers commented, in the next few days, upon this exodus of several prominent New Yorkers.

There were a thousand and one versions of the shooting circulated about New York that night. They said that Thaw stood over White and cursed him roundly, defying police and public to interfere. Another rumor had it that Harry and Evelyn fled through the roof taies of White and Thaw, locked in deadtals of White and Thaw, locked in deadly embrace, rolling over and over on the roof garden, in desperate struggle for a revolver. It was not until the newspaper accounts were read the next morning that the general public obtained a pretty clear idea of what had occurred.

Meanwhile relatives of the principals in the tragedy were being notified.

Harry Thaw's mother, Mrs. Mary Copley Thaw, was en voyage to Europe. News bulletins of the murder had been flashed by wireless to outgoing vessels. Such an important slaying would be re-flashed to other vessels. Friends and relatives of Thaw's mother were fearful lest the mother be abruptly informed of the tragedy by one of the news messages. So they sent out private messages by wireless, addressed to Mrs. Mary Copley Thaw and worded as gently as possible.

Shock to Mrs. Holman.

At 2 o'clock that morning a messenger came to the residence of Mrs. C. J. Holman in Pittsburgh. Evelyn's mother was told of the murder. She was dazed. Then she broke down and wailed:

"Evelyn never did anything to deserve such misfortune as this in her life."

When she regained composure Mrs. Holman, in answer to questions, made vigorous denial that she even knew Stanford White. Then she declined to answer any more questions. The next evening after the murder Mrs. Holman started for New York to join her daughter.

Throughout Pittsburgh the latest act of Harry Thaw was discussed, to the exclusion of all other topics. The city had not been so stirred by an act of violence concerning one of its citizens since the attempted assassination of H. C. Frick.

Harry Thaw's life—which Pittsburgh well know—was gone over from boyhood. The general conclusion was:

"Well, Harry Thaw has finally made real trouble for himself."

One of the first to be informed of the murder was the son of the slain man, Lawrence White. This youth's immediate thought was to spare his mother as much shock as possible. He summoned one of his father's two chauffeurs from the garage and was driven over the road to the White Summer home at St. James, Long Island, where his mother was peacefully asleep.

The son paced the grounds until daylight. Then he went over to the home of his mother's sister, Mrs. Prescott Butler, and told her. Returning home young White told Mrs. J. Bloomfield Wetherill, another of his mother's sisters. When Mrs. White awakened her two sisters and her son informed her of the tragedy.

Breaking the News.

Mrs. White received the shocking news with self-command. In fact, it was said that she thought less of herself than she did of her husband's aged mother, Mrs. Richard Grant White. When the latter was told she collapsed and required medical attention.

At mid-morning Lawrence White, his mother and aunts came up to the White town house at Gramercy Park to complete arrangements for the funeral.

White's body had remained on the floor of the roof garden auditorium, covered with a sheet, until it should be viewed by a coroner. After this official formality was over the body was sent to an undertaking establishment to be prepared for burial.

Among those who saw the sheeted dead on the roof garden floor were men who were familiar with Stanford White's career as an architect. They knew that he had designed Madison Square Garden and that he considered it rightly one of his best efforts. The fearful irony of his assassination being staged in this very building struck the spectators.

Stanford White himself had a high sense of the dramatic in art and in life. But nothing so bizarre and so filled with sinister coincidence had ever touched the architect's life as the manner and place of his leaving it.

To Be Continued Tomorrow.

"Evelyn Only Made to Be Cast Aside"

Thaw killed a man who was of some use to the community, a genius. He killed White for a girl who was only made to be cast aside when people tired of her.—GERTRUDE ATHERTON.

Was Evelyn Nesbit Thaw Worth Saving?

Was Evelyn Nesbit Thaw worth saving?

Of course she was, scores of AMERICAN readers say. Gertrude Atherton, the novelist, says Evelyn was not worth saving. Here are some more letters from AMERICAN readers.

Evelyn, down in her heart, is better than most women for the experience she has gone through. Evelyn [illegible] suffer for her own sins and [illegible] is the one to judge. Instead of abusing Evelyn write her a sympathetic letter, and offer her a helping hand in her trouble. Meet Evelyn face to face and find out if the statements against her are correct and just.

I hope and pray that poor Harry will be released and that Evelyn and he may be reconciled. They deserve happiness for the rest of their lives. MRS. JACK FERRIS.

Evelyn was worth saving. I make this statement not from sentimentality, but from my observation of human nature. I believe any woman who has been forced to meet such a gigantic bulwark of adverse public sentiment must have some good qualities. Even though she be devoid of good qualities, it is not the proper attitude to take that her life has been entirely wasted. [illegible] of all the publicity that has been given her case and she will compare favorably with many women I know.
X. Y. Z.

I believe Evelyn, to be saved, must prove that she is willing to be saved. Certainly she is worth saving, but why does she remain in the limelight? Why does she seek the publicity of old? Why does she not go into seclusion and endeavor to live down her past? I believe she is worth saving. L. B. R.

GUARDS SHIVER WHILE THAW GETS FRESH AIR

LITTLETON, N. H., Sept. 17.—Harry Thaw is a regular fiend for fresh air and especially cold air. The AMERICAN man found that out while riding with him on the train.

So did United States Marshal Eugene P. Nute, who sat beside the AMERICAN man.

Likewise Sheriff Holman Drew, who sat beside Harry and faced the two last named. Harry would have the train window up. That would have been all right when it was warm outdoors. It was cold, though.

Marshal Nute and Sheriff Drew exchanged glances and each shivered. Nothing doing, the window stayed open. The wind kept blowing.

The marshal's coat lapels and tie were fluttering furiously, and what wind was not getting down his neck was deflected full upon Sheriff Drew and the AMERICAN reporter.

"Kind 'er cool, eh?" broadly hinted the marshal, glancing sidewise at the sheriff.

"Yes," assented Thaw and the sheriff at once. "Hadn't you better button up your coat?" said Harry to Mr. Nute.

"Oh, no, I'm warm enough," was the polite answer.

Four times the hint was tried, but no use.

The window stayed up. The marshal shivered, ditto the sheriff, ditto the AMERICAN reporter.

(Scene 1—An hour later).

Everyone around Thaw shivering. Harry suddenly decided he wanted to sit with Governor Stone across the way and as soon as he had left the seat both the marshal and the sheriff made a grab for the window catch. Once the wind was shut out the marshal sighed with relief.

"Well, I'm glad that window's down at last. Let's hope it stays down, too," remarked Sheriff Drew, who hardly had the words out of his mouth before Harry wanted to come back. Scarcely seated in his seat, Thaw got hold of the window and lifted it higher than ever.

Marshal Nute gazed blankly but meaningly out at the mountains through which the train was sweeping.

"Well, I be d——," began the sheriff, but the marshal deprecatingly raised his hand.

COATICOOK ANGRY OVER 'FRAMED-UP' ARREST OF ANDREWS

COATICOOK, Que., Sept. 17.—Great indignation prevails in this town over the arrest of "Honest" John Andrews at Colebrook, N. H., on the charge of violating the immigration law of the United States.

Andrews was the man who arrested Jerome for gambling in the public streets of Coaticook. He was given the warrant, and served it, as the regular constable who first arrested Thaw and then petitioned for his release by way of habeas corpus would not do so.

The arrest is looked upon as a frame-up between the deputized attorney and Captain Lanyon. Andrews is charged having carried an old woman named Chamberlain from Canada and leaving her in Colebrook, N. H., on October 15 last. He admits that he did so, but it was because the Canadian authorities said she was an undesirable citizen. Mrs. Chamberlain, as a matter of fact, was a citizen of the United States.

This last move on the part of Jerome has intensified the feeling which has prevailed among all classes of the community since he arrived here.

RED WILL BRING THAW LUCK, SAYS HUB SEER

SHOULD WEAR FLAME COLOR, ADVISES JONES

"Thaw's astral color is flame red and he should wear red wherever he goes," today declared R. P. Jones of No. 864 Columbus avenue, "seer and prophet of character." Thaw's lucky gem is agate and this will bring him safely through all his troubles.

Seer Jones, who maintains Thaw made a mistake in marrying Evelyn, "because he will always be her inferior when she is about," declares:

By SEER R. P. JONES.

Harry Kendall Thaw's life number is One. It indicates a strong nature with the power to create, develop and govern all things pertaining to this life. But first he must completely overcome self before he can attain his highest success.

Thaw is not a weakling as many are led to believe. Indeed he is a power within himself, capable of making other people about him active.

His vibration signifies truth and separateness. He is the essence of truthfulness. He is peculiar at times and, on certain occasions, he will fight to give the truth. He also demands that the truth be given him.

The significance of the word separateness in his vibration is a desire to be much alone. He will mingle with the world, but will never be really of it. At such times, he is more often in a deep study of happenings that have previously occurred to him or concerning himself.

His vibrations show that he will meet with affliction and that everything he gains will be only through affliction; that is, until he has studied himself and his peculiarities and overcomes self.

Astral Color Is Red.

He will also find that his friends will leave him or so abuse his confidence that he and his friends will have cause to separate. Later he and his friends will renew the friendship. They will realize that they love him without thought of return. It is this knowledge that so often buoys Thaw up so suddenly from despondency, when he finds so many people love him and so strongly.

Thaw is original and comprehensive in thought and always expects that his opinion be respected.

His opposites are limited and unlimited denoting that he is strongly one or the other in all his actions through life.

His astral color is flame red and to wear that color would assist him greatly with his vibrations and the ability to control the vibrations of others.

Thaw should understand that his name stands for unity in all things and upon all places of action. The vowel "A," which shows so persistently in all three of his names, denotes his great strength, persistency and force to control those around him.

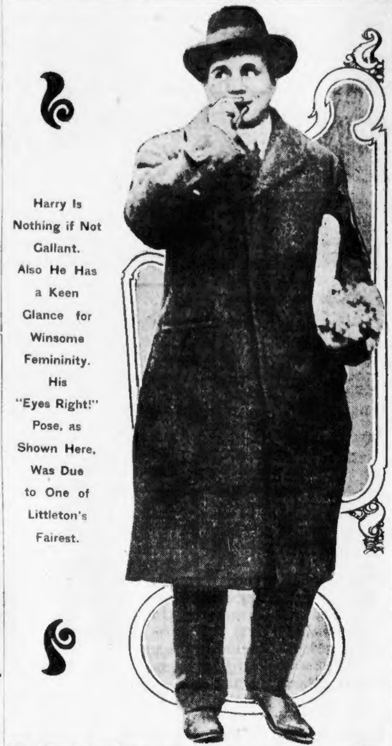
Thinks for Himself.

In choosing Evelyn Nesbit as a wife, Thaw made a mistake. She is much stronger than he is and would absolutely control any and all situations.

Thaw stands for boldness of action and independence. He stands for the "I am" principle, a strong manifestation of spirit. He will seek advice from others, but after reasoning and thinking, he is invariably controlled by the light coming from his own inner consciousness.

Thaw should keep in mind that his law of opposites are limited and unlimited. This first shows that he should express and maintain unity. His lucky gem is an agate.

THAW'S ROGUISH EYE



Harry Is Nothing if Not Gallant. Also He Has a Keen Glance for Winsome Femininity. His "Eyes Right!" Pose, as Shown Here, Was Due to One of Littleton's Fairest.

Thaw Fresh Air Fiend; Gazes Long Upon Mountains

LITTLETON, N. H., Sept. 17.—After seven years in Matteawan Harry K. Thaw is now a fresh air fiend. While his companions and guards appear to suffer keenly from the cold, Thaw persists in having plenty of fresh air sweeping around him at all times.

On the way to Littleton, he persisted in having the car window up. United States Marshal Nute, Sheriff Drew and an AMERICAN reporter shivered all the way.

"Kind of cool, eh?" hinted Nute, glancing at the sheriff.

"Yes," assented Thaw and the sheriff together. "Hadn't you better button up your coat, Marshal?" said Thaw.

"Oh, no, I'm warm enough," was the reply. The hint was tried four times, and was unsuccessful.

Thaw's room in the Thayer House overlooks the Amonoosuc valley, to Mount Eustis in the distance. The mountains are a never-ending source of delight to Thaw, whose only request is that he get a better view of the White Mountain range from the higher part of the town.

SWIFT DECIDES HAMPDEN ROAD ROUTE IS LEGAL

Attorney-General Swift today rendered a decision to the Public Service Commission that the Hampden Railroad Company had not exceeded its authority in changing its route from the connection point on the Central Massachusetts division of the Boston & Maine into the city of Springfield, from that originally outlined. The question has arisen in connection the petition of the company for approval of an issue of $2,500,000 of bonds by the commission to pay for the construction of the road. The Attorney-General's ruling is a victory for the petitioners.

The Attorney-General says that the laws under which the road is proceeding is somewhat "elastic" in form and will allow of change of route so long as it is kept within the outside limits of the grant.

The Attorney-General says: "I am led to the conclusion, therefore, that the Hampden Railroad corporation has the right, under its charter and the laws of the commonwealth, to build its road upon the route shown to be xed by the certificate as filed in the office of the secretary of the commonwealth and annexed to the agreement of association; and the description of the route contained in the agreement of association, so far as it is not required by law, and is inconsistent with the route fixed under authority of Sections 20 and 21, is, in my opinion, to be disregarded."

It is understood that the commission will now take up the petition for approval of bonds in executive session soon.

A New Gas Light

USE GAS THE MODERN FUEL

SOFT AND WELL DIFFUSED

CORRECT COLOR VALUE

CONVENIENT IGNITION

ECONOMICAL

After careful test, we offer the new "Golden Giant" Reflex Lamp, so named on account of the large volume of mellow, golden light thrown from the big single mantle.

Fitted with distributing reflector, as shown, it throws a broad, useful, downward light, equal to that of 400 candles, at a cost of only ¾ of a cent per hour.

The gas, which lights from a small pilot flame, is turned on or off by a pull of the single chain.

Smaller than the Humphrey Arc Lamp, larger than the ordinary Reflex Inverted Burner, it is not intended to supplant either, but fills a distinct field of its own, such as stores, work-rooms, restaurants—over factory benches—show windows, etc.

The same volume of light from the Mazda Tungsten Lamp would cost two or three times as much. In addition, the gas light is softer and better diffused.

To introduce this lamp we offer it on extremely low and easy terms. Price, fitted with Alabaster Sheffield Reflector, $2 on delivery and 18 small monthly payments, care and maintenance included during this period. With Holophane Reflector, 50 cents additional on the first payment.

Send for a Representative who will gladly call, or visit our Show Rooms at No. 16 West Street, where this and other lamps and a large line of heaters and appliances are on exhibition.

Carrie was with them. Mr. Williams usually sat between the girls.

"I often carried Emma and Carrie Wellington and Mr. Williams to the Touraine and left the girls there while Mr. Williams would return to get his wife and daughter and take them to the theatre. While they were enjoying the performance he would return to the hotel.

"Occasionally Williams would send the parents of the Wellington girls to the theatre the same night his wife and daughter went, and on such occasions he would take Emma and Carrie home.

"I would go in town and get Mrs. Williams and the daughter and carry them home. Williams would arrange for a taxi cab to carry him home later from Milton. This happened many times.

Williams Was Generous.

"Mr. Williams was awfully generous with his money. I remember last Christmas seeing him give Emma Wellington a big roll to pay in presents to waiters and others at the down-town hotels.

"I have carried costly gifts to the home of the Wellington girls. Once I carried two costly Persian rugs. I carried millinery and other gifts, always at night.

"One afternoon I carried Williams and Emma and Carrie Wellington to a vacant house at No. 26 Commonwealth avenue and heard them talking about buying it, but I don't know that they ever did.

"Another day—it was last May—I recall seeing Emma Wellington reading over a document. It had long pages and was typewritten. She would read and turn the pages and Williams would nod approval. I have since thought this may have been his will.

"I got on to his dual life right away and often pitied Mrs. Williams. In fact, I felt like telling her, but did not wish to add to her troubles. She appeared to have enough to bear as it was. She was very devoted to him."

Brasel declared Williams was a fine boss, and that he would never ask work for one more generous or considerate. "He always gave me $5 extra for a night job," said Brasel. "All he died owing me was for three night trips just before his illness."

FOUR INJURED WHEN HARVARD STAGING FALLS

Four men were injured, two of them seriously, and as many more had narrow escapes when a staging holding the men and several hundred bricks and mortar collapsed on the inside of the new Harry Widener Library in the yard of Harvard College shortly before noon today. The injured are:

AXEO LYNDBLOOM, thirty, of No. 18 Bishop road, Malden; both feet fractured, broken wrists and internal injuries.

ALFRED GOMAST, twenty-two, a helper, of No. 18 Bradford street, Boston; injuries to his back and bad scalp wounds.

THOMAS AKIN, thirty, mason, of No. 139 Auburn street, Newton, injuries to back.

FRANK FERNALD, thirty, a helper; cut and scalp wound.

No reason for the collapse could be given by the contractor in charge of the building. Several of the workmen, when the planking gave way, held on to the upright supports and saved themselves from being pitched thirty or more feet.

Fernald and Akin fell only to the first floor, a distance of about fifteen feet and escaped with minor injuries. Lundbloom and Gomast were not so fortunate and fell the entire space of thirty feet to the basement.

Hurried calls for ambulances from the police and hospitals soon brought every available machine in the city.

New Address for the Fort Banks Officers

This was moving day at Fort Banks, Winthrop. As the department has fixed Fort Warren as the headquarters of the Coast Artillery for the Boston district, the officers at Fort Banks today packed up their duds and sailed on the government boat Anderson down to their new home. The Tenth Artillery Band was transferred yesterday.

The shifting of headquarters does not mean the abandonment of the garrison at Winthrop. Companies 7 and 152 will remain there. The only change was in the transfer of officers. Coast Adjutant Captain F. W. Ralston, Captain C. T. Bunker and First Lieutenant W. C. Coenig were the officers whose quarters have been changed to Fort Warren.

PRESIDENT TO DELAY NAMING OF BILLINGS

WASHINGTON, Sept. 17.—Representative Mitchell of Massachusetts called on President Wilson today to request him to postpone the appointment of a Collector of the Port of Boston until Representative Murray of Massachusetts is able to confer with him. The latter is detained at his home in Massachusetts by a death in his family.

The President told Representative Mitchell that he would delay the appointment as long as possible.

Representative Mitchell asserted after his conference with President Wilson that there was no bitter factional fight over the collectorship, but that a considerable body of the party believes that the appointment should not be made until after the November elections. He said the opposition to Edmund Billings had been misinterpreted.

Secretary of State Donahue of Massachusetts and T. F. Dwyer of the Democratic State Committee, also called on the President today. They asked the Chief Executive to make a speech in Massachusetts during the Fall campaign.

Charge Police Used "Stool Pigeons"

Attorney Ford Bitterly Arraigns Officer in South Boston.

Accusing the police with using "stool pigeon" methods to obtain evidence against his clients, Attorney Francis J. Ford, in the South Boston District Court, today, bitterly arraigned Patrolmen Patrick J. Magner and James Breen of the Broadway stations, who had charged two young men, before the court, with assault and battery. Attorney Ford said:

"Your honor, the officers are entirely wrong. Your honor is taking the testimony of a man who was convicted of the same offence and who served a sentence of six months. It is the evidence of a "stool pigeon."

The man referred to was Edward Perry of 17 Way street, who testified that he saw Alfred Barrett attempt to rescue a prisoner from Patrolman Breen and also assault Patrolman Magner. The other young man, Edward McCarron, was charged with drunkenness and assault and battery upon Patrolman Magner. Both were found guilty and sentenced. Barrett appealed.

HUERTA SEEKS TO GET RID OF U. S. WARSHIPS

WASHINGTON, Sept. 17.—Although Washington recognizes the fact that the address of General Huerta at Mexico City yesterday is distinctly meant for home consumption, officials here are studying it to find out whether Huerta retains any hope that the negotiations with the United States government will culminate with success. The message is belligerent toward the United States in some respects, and the only recognition of American policy running through it is the desire to promise that elections will be held next month throughout Mexico. Reports are current that Senor Zamacona has been in informal communication with the State Department and the negotiations have made several steps forward since his coming here. Secretary of State Bryan has refused several times either to confirm or deny this report.

American warships will remain in Mexican waters indefinitely, despite any desire to the contrary announced by President Huerta. This was the opinions expressed by State and Navy department officials today in commenting on the clause in Huerta's message in which he called attention to the fact that the period of six months for which Mexico had "invited" the American battleships would expire next month and strongly intimating that the "invitation" would be renewed.

It is thought here Huerta's move is a shrewd step to try and get rid of the American ships on or before October 25, the date on which he claims the "permission" to remain expires, and the day before the scheduled elections. Navy department officialls, however, claim that the battleships Louisiana and Michigan now at Vera Cruz would not have to move, no matter what action the Mexican Congress takes, because they already are more than three miles off shore, and therefore outside the international "three-mile limit" and technically on the high seas.

Olympic Passes the Gaynor Liner

NEW YORK, Sept. 17.—The following wireless telegram was received here today from the White Star liner Olympic:

"Passed Lusitania, bearing the body of the late Mayor of New York city, William J. Gaynor, at noon, Tuesday. Lusitania was then 1,660 miles from New York. Passengers on the Olympic sent an expression of sympathy by wireless to Rufus Gaynor, son of the dead official, who is taking his father's body home. In reply to the query: 'Any news?' the wireless operator on the Lusitania answered that he was not allowed to give out information."

CASSIDY TELLS NEW METHOD TO KEEP FISH

Mr. Cassidy tells you today of a new method of preserving fish for shipment. It promises to revolutionize the fish industry and has an especial interest to Boston, the second largest fish port in the world.

By HARRY P. CASSIDY.

A Nova Scotian by the name of Henderson has just invented a process for preserving fish for shipment that promises to revolutionize the entire fish industry in the Maritime Provinces.

This method does entirely away with the use of ice, salt, pickle or other preservatives and so perfectly preserves the fish that two weeks after preservation (which is sufficient time for this important food article to reach cities in central United States, West Indies, and some ports in South America), the fish is in an exactly similar state as when it was drawn from its native water.

Previously it has been the practice to sort and sun-dry all fish to be preserved or, should they be intended for nearby markets, either ice them or ship in cars equipped with refrigerating apparatus.

How Plan Works.

The new method, it is claimed, abolishes this slow and expensive practice and enables the shipper to prepare quickly and inexpensively his shipments in such a way that the product, two weeks after shipment and in a foreign market, would rival the highest quality of fresh fish.

The process used is as follows: The fish are dumped into a tank holding sea water which has been filtered through four cylinder-like tanks containing willow charcoal and screens to remove the noxious gases and foreign substances.

Next, brown sugar is placed in the tank holding the fish to serve as a germicide for such organisms as may be active at freezing temperature. Then by refrigeration the temperature is lowered to ten degrees C below zero, during which time 16.1 per cent. salt is added to prevent ice formation and to assist the formation of a thin protective coating over the fish themselves.

Having allowed the fish to remain in this treatment for two hours they are ready for shipment, removed from the tank, and placed in the package or barrel to await transportation to market.

This process is based on the theory that putrefaction of fish is first caused by bone taint, due to the fact that in the old methods of curing fish the specific or animal heat is partly left within the fish.

New Method Patented.

The new method, which has been introduced in Halifax, N. S., acts as a preventative to bone taint, completely removing the specific or animal heat from the fish to be cured.

The method has been patented in all important countries and though not for sale can be applied by anyone who is interested, providing the royalty be paid the inventor. Should the method, after having been tested, be adopted, the Nova Scotia shippers will be able to place upon many markets fresh fish of the highest quality.

NEW CHARGES AGAINST SCHMIDT

New York Authorities Say He Obtained Place as Clergyman by Fraud.

Recently it was said that Schmidt had performed many marriages without demanding licenses, and had made no records on the church books. These marriages are illegal, and must be performed over again.

"A Master Criminal."

More revolting details of the dual life led by Schmidt during the past year are just coming to light. His was a Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde existence in real life. Everything tends to show that Schmidt, during the day, lived the model life of a man of God, but as soon as night came he divested himself of his priestly garb and indulged in orgies that eclipsed even those that are common in the underworld.

There seems no doubt today in the minds of the police that Schmidt is a monster and a master criminal, a man who would stop at nothing to gain the end he desired. And it is the belief of most of those who have come into contact with the man that his expressions, intended to create the impression that he is a madman, are part of a shrewd scheme by which he intends to cheat the death chair.

Driven to Crime by Fear.

That Schmidt cut the throat of the Aumuller girl and then dismembered her body because he feared she would expose his relationship with her was learned today through the story told by Annie Hirt, who worked with Anna Aumuller in St. Boniface's rectory.

Through Miss Hirt's story the police learned that even before Miss Aumuller was placed in the flat by Schmidt, where he later murdered her, a child was born to her, in another part of the city.

The little babe died soon after coming into the world. Whether its death was from natural causes or whether it was killed is not yet known. After the birth of the child it is said Schmidt told the girl he would take care of it, placing it in an orphanage, and that as soon as possible he would desert his duties as a clergyman, rent a flat, come to live with her as her husband and bring the child with him. He never told the girl it was dead. It was evident from the conversation Miss Aumuller had with Miss Hirt just a day or two before Miss Aumuller quit her position in the rectory to live in the flat, that she had lost faith in Schmidt's promise to her.

Tearfully she told Miss Hirt that she was "in great trouble." Miss Hirt pleaded with her to unburden herself then. The girl decided that she would wait until Tuesday of the next week, promising that if then her troubles had not vanished she would tell her story not only to Miss Hirt, but to Father Braun, pastor of St. Boniface Church.

It is believed that Schmidt promised the girl that on September 2 (Tuesday) he would come to the girl and live with her. It is believed that he made his promise because of the girl's threat to expose him. Instead of keeping his promise Schmidt crept into the flat that night and murdered the girl while she slept, chopping her body into pieces and dumping it into the Hudson River in the hope of destroying all evidences of his crime.

Tracing Counterfeits.

United States secret service men today were tracing the counterfeit operations alleged to have been conducted by Schmidt and his friend, "Dr. Muret," the dentist, who is being held in the Tombs on a technical charge. A number of bogus $10 and $20 bills recently were passed in nearby Connecticut towns and the secret men are trying to trace them to Schmidt and Muret.

Muret today declared that it was Schmidt who suggested the counterfeiting scheme. Schmidt no doubt laid particular stress upon the fact of how easy it would be for him in his clerical garb to "shove the queer." In case he were caught in the act of passing bogus money he could explain that the money had been in the collection box and so avoid any suspicion that he was implicated in its manufacture. From those who lived in the neighborhood of Muret's flat, which it is said Schmidt visited almost nightly, today came stories of wild escapades in which women and girls nearly always figured. Carousing was kept up until the early morning hours. Several times it is said young girls who had been invited to the flat left there screaming.

"It was fear, not love, that caused Father Schmidt to murder Anna Aumuller," said Annie Hirt.

"When Anna left St. Boniface's on August 30," said Miss Hirt, she was in a terrible frame of mind. She had tears in her eyes when she bade me good-by.

"'You are the only girl friend that I have, Annie,' she said. 'I am in great trouble and I want to tell you about it.'

"I tried to comfort her and asked her to tell me then. I suggested that she go with me to Father Braun and tell him. But she trembled at the suggestion and refused.

"'But I will tell you,' she said, as she left, 'I'll be back on Tuesday—September 2—and I shall tell you a long story.'

"I firmly believe," continued Miss Hirt, "that Anna had lost faith in Schmidt. I further believe that she told him she was coming to me with her story. He murdered her because he feared the law."

The Rev. John S. Braun, rector of St. Boniface's Church, upon being told of Miss Hirt's story, declared that he, too, thought that fear of exposure prompted Father Schmidt's act.

"Although the man was peculiar at times," said Father Braun, "I do not believe he is insane. He is a monster. I hope he is justly punished. There must be no false view of this awful thing."

Practically all those who have come into contact with the murderer of Anna Aumuller are reaching the conclusion that he is not insane, but, to the contrary, is one of the shrewdest and most crafty criminals as well as the most versatile they have ever encountered.

MISS HELEN MARIE MASON, Roxbury girl who is suing George R. Caldwell, seventy-five, for $75,000 for breach of promise.

GIRL, 20, TELLS OF WOOING BY CALDWELL, 75

The story of the alleged courtship of twenty-year-old Helen Marie Mason, of No. 169 Longwood avenue, Roxbury, by George R. Caldwell, seventy-five, four times married, and now on his honeymoon in New York with another girl, eighteen-year-old Maude A. Taylor, of Dorchester, was told today by Miss Mason, who is suing Caldwell for $75,000 for alleged breach of promise.

"On the night of June 9, 1912," Miss Mason said, "when I was nineteen, Mr. Caldwell proposed to me. He said that he loved me, and that I loved him, and that we would be married. I agreed and he went to ask mother. After some hesitation, Mamma agreed. I had grown to be really very fond of him, as much in love as any girl can be with a man so much older, and I accepted him.

"I have known Mr. Caldwell for a number of years. I met him in Garrison Hall, when my parents were living there. I was only seventeen years old at the time, and after studying a while at the Somerville Latin School, I was then a student at the Girls' Latin School.

"My father had died March 25, 1912, and I had at once left the Girls' High School and studied to be a nurse, so that by June I was qualified and accepted as a nurse at the Massachusetts Homeopathic Hospital. I had intended to begin nursing at once, but he dissuaded me from it. It was no work for a woman, he said, and there would be no need of my doing it after marriage.

"The fact of my father's recent death, and that Mr. Caldwell was more than three times my age, kept my mother and me from giving the engagement much publicity, for we were afraid of the newspapers; but I notified all my personal friends, and I can show the announcements in court.

"Mr. Caldwell gave me this diamond ring I am wearing, and made me many other presents. Before my father's death we had left Garrison Hall and come here to live, and during the past year he called here three or four times a week regularly.

The convention banquet will be held tonight, when addresses will be made by John Golden, James E. Cassidy and Mayor Kay.

Buffalo Bill Greets Prince of Monaco

CODY, Wyo., Sept. 17.—"We welcome you to the great West," said Buffalo Bill to Prince Albert of Monaco as he alighted from his Pullman today. As the Prince stepped into an automobile a mighty cheer went up from the crowd of cowgirls, cowboys and Indians.

ECZEMA SPREAD ALL OVER HANDS

Could Hardly Do Housework. Pimples Full of Matter. Itching and Burning Intense. Cuticura Soap and Ointment Cured.

P. O. Box 25, Alburg, Vt.—"My hands were so affected with eczema that I could hardly do my house work for all summer.

The eczema broke out as pimples full of matter and the itching and burning were so intense that I scratched and made it spread all over my hands. They itched and burned so I could not sleep. I tried different kinds of salves, pills and liquids but to no success. Then I used Cuticura Soap and Ointment. I washed the sores with Cuticura Soap then let them dry and then I used the Cuticura Ointment. In a few nights I could sleep well and in two weeks my hands were completely cured." (Signed) Mrs. George Pelkey, Oct. 14, 1912.

A generation of mothers has found no soap so well suited for cleansing and purifying the skin and hair of infants and children as Cuticura Soap. Its absolute purity and refreshing fragrance alone are enough to recommend it above ordinary skin soaps, but there are added to these qualities delicate yet effective emollient properties, derived from Cuticura Ointment, which render it most valuable in overcoming a tendency to distressing eruptions and promoting a normal condition of skin and hair health. Cuticura Soap (25c.) and Cuticura Ointment (50c.) sold everywhere. Liberal sample of each mailed free, with 32-p. book. Address post-card "Cuticura, Dept. T, Boston."

☞Men who shave and shampoo with Cuticura Soap will find it best for skin and scalp.

A Filene COAT for Every Coat Use at $25

Three styles taken from thirty—and looking so good that it doesn't matter which three we talk about. Motor and Touring Coats—Tailored and Dressy Coats—Raincoats—Sport Coats—Evening Wraps—all at this standard price.

1. Plaid Eponge is the unusual material in one coat. Tartan and Scotch plaid closely woven backs show through the black "spongy" surface weave in a most attractive way. Collar of rich plush, and plush covered buttons. New semi-raglan sleeve. $25.

2. A collar of silk ratyne on this boucle coat; cutaway square and lined throughout with guaranteed satin. Has the new seamless shoulder. In navy, tan and black. $25

(Filene's—4th Floor)

3. A cutaway coat of heavy eponge; has generous sleeves and pockets, new notched collar of black velvet, and satin faced wide lapels. Loses nothing in effect when collar is buttoned up around throat. Lined throughout. Navy, black and tan. $25.

New Style Kinks in

Lingerie and Tailored Waists at $2

Is the drop shoulder most becoming to you or had you been looking particularly for some high neck lingerie waists? You will find both among these new $2 waists. The "lingerie" ribbon bow trims one style.

There are pretty net frilled waists, embroidered voiles, novelty voiles and cravat waists, also at $2.

Tailored blouses include new rosebud embroidered linens, striped ratine with new collar, or corded madras. These tailored waists are particularly well cut and made. $2.

(Filene's—Fifth Floor)

An Opportunity in

Princess slips with yoke and skirt trimmings of laces and embroideries. These also ribbon trimmed. Especially good at $1

"Imperator Rose"

introduced in this week's

Millinery Opening

This exquisite color is the shade chosen for the ballroom of the great new S. S. Imperator. Rose has always been conceded one of the most becoming colors. In this deep glowing shade it brings out all the lovely colors of hair, eyes and complexion and so makes the hat it adorns becoming.

One picturesque little hat has soft black velvet crown, soft rose color shirrings and band of fitch fur.

A flare shaped tete de negre velvet hat is ornamented with plumes of rose color.

A black plush hat is trimmed with rose ribbon and rose colored plumes.

Prices on these range from $22.50 to $40.

Included in the Formal Opening Showing are smart street hats, tailored suit hats, semi-dress hats, hats for evening wear, and being reproductions of original French models, made of selected French materials.

Filene "French-American" Hats

(Filene's—Sixth Floor)

Clever New Styles in

Silk Dresses $18.50, $25, $39.50

The style is the thing nowadays. The plaid sash on a meteor gown, the pulled-up-in-front yoke skirt on a canton crepe, the tailored simplicity of a charmeuse dress, and the quaint pleated tunic on the "Sunshine" frock—these details take the dresses out of the ordinary. They have an "air" quite unusual, as well as a price unusually little. $18.50.

At $25 one may choose from several new styles of silk frocks. One shows a very long pleated tunic with bands of Chinese embroidery and skirt inset of the same. Another is in a bolero style with jacket vest effect of lace. Another has chiffon blouse draped with the charmeuse which forms the skirt.

French Models Reproduced in Silk Gowns at $39.50

A Premet gown is reproduced in crepe de chine. The long chiffon sleeves, touches of velvet and frilled vest show French inspiration. Another Premet reproduction shows an unusual Chinese girdle and tunic. Still another has sleeves and sash of Chinese crepe. These gowns are $39.50 each.

A pretty bridge gown shows rose embroidered net combined with dark colored chiffon and meteor.

LATEST FROM TODAY'S STOCK MARKETS

By W. H. ROSS, Financial Editor.

Stocks had a recessional tendency in early trading, although a number of issues made gains. Reading was particularly strong, but failed to hold all of its advance to the end of the first hour.

New Haven went to a new low record, selling down to 87⅝, and afterwards recovering a fraction. By 11 o'clock in Boston it stood at 88, off 1½. Active coppers got less support. Granby was down a point and Calumet & Arizona, Old Dominion and North Butte had declined fractionally. Arizona Commercial was a shade higher.

At the end of the first hour in New York Reading was up 1⅛ and the rest of the list ruled weak. Declines included Canadian Pacific ¾, Northern Pacific ⅝, Southern Pacific ½, Union Pacific ⅝, American Can ¾, Steel ½, Amalgamated ⅝, Rock Island common ⅞, and preferred 1⅛.

Old Colony drill hole No. 4 struck the Mayflower lode at 1639 feet and continued in it for 126 feet. The belt is heavily mineralized and carries copper of all grades. President Fay says the showing in this hole is the best Old Colony drilling has made yet.

Reading Was Opening Feature.

Heavy trading in Reading was the feature in New York at the opening, speculative interest being largely confined to that stock. It began at 169½ for a gain of 1⅜ and increased the advance more than two points. Later there was some profit taking. A majority of the other issues were under some pressure and sold from last night's closing. The first sales of Reading amounted to 12,000 shares.

Among the issues to decline were: Steel, Union Pacific, Southern Pacific, Northern Pacific, Pennsylvania, New York Central, Great Northern preferred, Erie, Chespeake & Ohio, Canadian Pacific, Anaconda and Amalgamated. New Haven began at 88½ and within a few minutes touched the lowest point it had reached on the present movement. It closed last night at 89⅝. Missouri Pacific, after opening unchanged, made a small gain, as did St. Paul and American Telephone & Telegraph. Chino was unchanged on the first sale but advanced later. Baltimore & Ohio was strong, gaining a point, while American Can also rose.

The Curb was steady.

Labor troubles in Great Britain caused heaviness in the London market. Americans in London were cheerfully regarded and above New York parity. Union Pacific was irregular, but Canadian Pacific was strong there on international buying.

Considering U. P. Melon.

It is said that Union Pacific directors will soon decide whether to declare a special dividend to stockholders from the proceeds of the scale of the former road's Southern Pacific interests. The question is to be first passed upon by the executive committee and they will make a recommendation to the full board.

It is understood that directors are not unanimous in favor of making a cash distribution. It is generally believed, it is said, that "one powerful interest in the road is very decidedly in favor of the cash distribution, while a second strong interest which in former years was considered the strongest opponent of segregation or similar plan is now inclined to favor the special dividend distribution plan, though not aggressively urging it.

"The third position in the board is represented by interests who present the possibilities for the employment of the funds other than in a distribution, among other purposes being the holding of the funds for the possible purchase of the Central Pacific.

"The possibility of the preferred stock sharing in any distribution that may be decided upon is considered remote by those who have examined the section of the charter that applies.

"Any distribution that is made to stockholders will be looked upon by the directors as a distribution of surplus earnings and not of assets, however much it may be urged that the Southern Pacific stock was a part of capital assets being purchased through a bond issue and the proceeds of its sale are likewise.

"Though there is some indefinite talk of a possible action by bond and security holders other than common stockholders to enjoin any proposed distribution if such is decided upon, directors said that they had heard of no such opposition."

One Union Pacific director intimates that no "insider" will be given any information regarding dividend action in advance of an announcement to be made immediately upon the executive committee, which consists of Judge Lovett, chairman; Mortimer Schiff, Frank A. Vanderlip, Otto H. Kahn, William Rockefeller and Marvin Hughitt, coming to a decision.

When Baltimore & Ohio directors hold a monthly meeting tomorrow two Union Pacific men will be elected to the places of John P. Green and Joseph Wood, who represented the Pensylvania Railroad on the directorate when the Pennsylvania controlled the Baltimore & Ohio.

To Protect Foreigners.

New York trust companies are opposed to the income tax section which provides for taxing incomes of foreign holders of the bonds of American companies and are at work to have the objectional clause eliminated. New York bankers fear that it will hurt the sale of American securities in Europe. Attorney Joseph M. Hatfield, who is counsel for the companies, says:

"The United States for many years to come will have to borrow money abroad. This money will have to be borrowed, not to develop anything here in the East, but the great resources of the South and West. Upon the prosperity of those sections depends the prosperity of the rest of the country.

"This is an amendment added by the Senate. The bill as it left the House only taxed non-residents either owning property in this country or carrying on a business, trade or profession here.

"The effect of this provision will be, in our judgment, to hinder, if not absolutely prevent, the further sale of securities abroad."

Make a Regional Bank Change.

An important amendment has been voted into the currency bill in the House, it providing that banks which become members of the proposed new system shall have unlimited rediscount privilege with federal reserve banks. This was done to provide for a great amount of currency and to answer the objection that the bill did not provide for enough elasticity to the circulation medium.

"Representative Johnson of Washington had five minutes fun with the House," a dispatch says, "when he offered an amendment changing the vignettes on the present system of note printing. He wants a vignette of the late General J. B. Weaver, one time Populist nominee for the Presidency, to adorn all $5 notes. The $10 notes will be decorated with the whiskers of the late Senator William Pfeffer of Kansas if Mr. Johnson has his way.

"The smiling, rotund figure of Silver Dick Bland of Missouri will decorate the twenties. The red head of Thomas Watson of Georgia is suggested for the $50 note. The face of Chairman Glass is suggested for the $100.

"Upon the new two hundred and fifty denominations Mr. Johnson suggests a reproduction of the graceful form of the present Secretary of State reciting his Chautauqua lecture, 'The Signs of the Times.' On the reverse of the bill Mr. Johnson proposes a group of jugglers, Tyrolean yodlers and the Florentine concert band."

London Copper Quotations.

The tone of the London copper warrants market was easier at the opening, spot being off 8s. 9d. and futures 5s. lower.

Recent sales of electrolytic are said to have been upon the basis of 16⅞ cents a pound only and the only big interest asking 17 was Phelps, Dodge and Co.

Financial News in Brief.

There is talk in international banking circles of gold imports for this country soon. It is thought a moderate amount may be taken from London.

The imports and exports of the United States show an increase of $64,300,000 for a seven months' period ending July, over a corresponding period in 1912, according to the department of commerce. The total trade during the period was $2,346,144,475, divided into imports of $1,018,871,475 and exports of $1,327,273,137. This shows a trade balance in favor of the United States of $308,401,662.

Total income of the Interborough-Metropolitan Company for the fiscal year ended June 30 aggregated $4,429,238, or $1,324,592 less than in the previous twelve months.

CATHERINE PAULINE GLAZIER COOK, on her honeymoon with Ensign George M. Cook, who has won forgiveness for their runaway marriage.

Ensign George M. Cook, of the United States navy, and his young bride, Catherine Pauline Glazier of Brookline—they were married several days ago without the consent of the bride's parents—are very happy today.

They have received the parental blessings from Mr. and Mrs. George M. Glazier. The young naval officer is in command of the McDonough, which is stationed at the Charlestown Navy Yard.

The marriage created a ripple in the Glazier home, and Mr. Glazier went so far as to state that Ensign Cook really stole his bride. Ensign Cook made the following statement to the AMERICAN:

"I am sorry that my marriage to Miss Glazier caused so much trouble. You see I had visions of a long Winter cruise. I did not mean to interfere with any plans that Mr. Glazier had made for his daughter."

Gardner Speaks in Hampden County

Congressman A. P. Gardner, candidate for the Republican nomination for Governor, today spoke at Westfield, the first place of the day's schedule of his western tour. Noonday speeches were made at Northampton, Chicopee and Chicopee Falls. A flying trip was made to Springfield where the Congressman spoke again. Tonight he speaks in the Mahogany Room of the new municipal auditorium in Springfield. Tomorrow he goes into Worcester County.

'HER LITTLE HIGHNESS' AT THE TREMONT

By NICHOLAS YOUNG.

Romance is not dead—at least, not in the theatre. The playgoer of today is never so happy as when served with lovely romance—the perishable kind that flares up and then flickers feebly under the strain of multiplied miseries. If you could have seen the audience at the Tremont last evening reach out with open arms to "Her Little Highness," you would concede that romance, with music, is all the drama needs to keep it on its feet.

The particular little highness that crossed the vision and sprinkled sunshine on the evening was Mizzi Hajos, whose refreshing charm almost made the play itself superfluous. Miss Hajos, who comes from Hungary, brought a splendid assortment of bewitching manners into play and made "Her Little Highness" more real than theatrical. She was worth romancing about at every stage of the game, and it is violating no confidence to say that without her the evening would have been dull.

"Her Little Higness," which was turned into a musical play from Channing Pollock's "Such a Little Queen," proved an attractive setting for the ingenue charms that Miss Hajos knows how to use so well. A queer but rather interesting grouping of the royalty with New York commoners made it a mixed party from the beginning, but when you discovered the little queen and her prime minister struggling with the mysteries of a Harlem flat and an outcast king doing duty in a department store, you knew that odd complications were impending.

Pleasing Singing Voice.

Through all the complexities and mistakes of a first performance, which included the presence of authors, composer and producers, Miss Hajos paid strict attention to her art. If she felt her responsibilities she did not show them. Her singing voice, while not large, was sweet and pleasing, with a tender note in it that won everyone in the house. She held herself in perfect control during the entire performance. She not only had an irresistible personality, but she backed it with an intelligence that made the evening worth while for those on the other side of the house.

Mr. DeKoven's music had the quality that he always commands in composition. He may even be threatened with hurdy-gurdy popularity with two or three of his numbers. The music was in safe hands, too, for the ensembles showed careful training, and the principals were not lacking in vocal requirements. There was much more than the usual run of good melody in Mr. De Koven's work.

While Miss Hajos was the picture that held your eye, Wallace McCutcheon left a good impression as the ardent young American admirer of the queen. On points he should have won the girl, but Stephen IV., although somewhat down and out as a king, knew how a queen's heart might be captured—and he did it. James Davis played the young king as if he was afraid somebody in the party had an ace. Neal McCay was a prime minister who fussed too much, but Willard Lewis played an American business man like an actor who knew what to do and how to do it.

From Mayor to Janitor.

Louise Kelly made herself an agreeable American girl, and William J. McCarthy proved that he was no one-part actor by serving first as the lord mayor of Mostar and later as Nate Quigg, a Harlem janitor. That was some contortion.

With its delicious romance, smart comedy and attractive score, Mizzi Hajos was in good company, but "Her Little Highness" was particularly rich in entertainment because it had Miss Hajos' fine girlish charms to brighten it. She is easy to look upon, and she has mastered the art of spreading her charms over a large area.

There is every reason to estimate that over 200,000 invitations have been issued throughout the United States and Canada to those interested in the third annual American road congress, to be held in Detroit, September 29 to October 4, inclusive. Early estimates of attendance have been revised again and again by the committee in charge of this congress until the members are now all at sea. Certain it is that arrangements are being made to handle one of the largest crowds that ever came to Detroit for any event. Every hotel man is being asked to prepare for this convention and it is estimated that it will require every hotel in the city and many private homes to take care of the delegates.

A great many firms have already used motor trucks to advantage, but, although the stride in supplanting the horse has been very swift, many firms have deterred from purchasing motor trucks, first on account of the price, and secondly because of the immediate cash investment required.

Some firms who could not keep their motor trucks in constant use have found the horse cheaper, since the investment cost of horses was very low and the cost of the motor truck considerably higher, and such firms not being able to keep their gasoline trucks constantly in service did not relish the higher first cost of the motor truck because they could not keep the money invested busy during enough working hours.

At one sweeping blow, the International Motor Company, the largest manufacturers of motor trucks in the country, has done away completely with the objection which has existed in the minds of many users of horse-drawn vehicles.

First they have made radical reductions in the prices on all Mack trucks, which have proven so popular throughout the country with users having work enough to justify such vehicles.

Nothing has made these great reductions in price possible but the steadily increasing business of the International Company which has been so quick to see that the ultimate destiny of the motor truck lies in a very large quantity of business and practically unrestricted output. The size of this manufacturer's operations had made possible the present new price list.

Argentine Beef Is Sold Cheap

NEW YORK, Sept. 17.—The consignment of 100 tons of Argentine beef, which arrived here Monday, the first big shipment ever brought to the United States, has all been disposed of. Part of it was sold to dealers in this city, and found its way into retail trade. When sold as Argentine beef the consumer got the benefit of a four-cent reduction on the pound. Here are some of the prices at which the meat was sold: Porterhouse and sirloin steaks, 18 cents a pound; prime rib roasts, 16 cents a pound; prime rib roasts, 10 cents; round of beef, 13 cents; chuck roast, 12½ cents, and soup meat, 10 cents.

RESERVOIR GIRL VICTIM MADE DEATH THREAT

Walter Fennelly of Golden avenue, Medford, today declared that he had in his possession a letter from Margaret Fallon, the Medford girl whose body was found floating in the Tufts College reservoir, threatening suicide.

"The suicide threat," he said, "followed a quarrel, witnessed by the girl, between Frank Rogers, whose ring she wore, and myself. Margaret had told me she preferred me to him. He came along. I had heard he had made threats to give me a beating. I invited him to try it. We started for a convenient place. Margaret interfered. A policeman came along and that ended it. This happened a week ago Monday night. Since then I have not seen Margaret."

An investigation was begun by State Officer Smith of Middlesex County today. County Solicitor Higgins said: "The inquiry is not begun because we have any suspicion of foul play, but to get at the facts." The Medford police today abandoned all inquiry into the case, following Medical Examiner Durell's report that the girl's death was probably suicidal.

"We leave it all up to the police. I do not believe Margaret killed herself," declared Thomas J. Fallon, father of the dead girl today. Mr. Fallon is seriously ill. "Margaret was worried about her mother's death three months ago, but was not the sort of girl to do away with herself."

May Fallon, one of the six surviving sisters of Margaret, said: "We still believe Margaret did not kill herself. We know she was keeping company with Fennelly, and that she was also acquainted with young Rogers, but knew of no quarrel."

Weeding Out Process Is On at Harvard

Coaches Separate Likely Looking Candidates from Rest of Squad

By SYDE LYNES.

THE weeding out process in the squad of huskies straining every sinew to gain a place on the big Crimson eleven this Fall, has already begun, the most likely looking candidates having been separated from the lesser lights where they can be watched by the coaches, who these days have a string of eyes all the way round their heads. And it is pretty evident from the wealth of material that is gathering and increasing every day on Soldiers Field, that some pretty good men are going to be ditched in the final selection for the team. Never before has Harvard had such a well conditioned and likely looking squad, and the best of it is, that the majority of the good ones are only sophomores.

At that, some of the coaches don't seem to think that Harvard, comparatively speaking, is so very fortunate in material this year. One of the coaches made the statement, and we won't quote him as he would not care to have his name used in this connection, although he is firm in his convictions, that last year Yale had a far better lot of material from which to build an eleven, and even in the Yale game the Elis outweighed their opponents ten to fifteen pounds to the man. This year, he stated, Yale has the greater part of that material still on hand, and the freshman team from last Fall, which consisted of a much more likely group of men than the Harvard freshman team.

Of course, the explanation of the results that seem contrary to what one would have expected under such conditions, is in the coaching if the teams. Yale has learned a pretty severe lesson, however, and it is a safe bet that a very different playing team will represent the Blue in the Stadium this year, from the one that was messed up by the Crimson, at New Haven. It is said the Bull-dog has been fed on sand and raw meat for some time past, and while the remembrance of divers twenty wounds inflicted on one fatal day in November, 1912, is still pretty vivid, the animal is once again in pretty good condition.

TWO BACKFIELDS WORKING OUT

TWO pretty fast backfields have been running through signals for the past couple of days under the shadow of the Stadium, directed by Coaches Wendell and Campbell, and the men included in them are the pick of the candidates. From these will be chosen the final backfield aggregation to plug holes in the sacred canine and extract his teeth, which, strictly on the quiet, we believe need the attention of a first-class dentist. It has also been suggested that his teeth were false and in the onslaught of the battle last year, he swallowed them. We wondered what was going on down at Nantucket the first few days of September, and private information says that a new set has been manufactured for the animal from the incisors of the many sharks that abound in the waters near the island. Such teeth are sharp.

The first backfield to be chosen consisted of Brickley, Hardwick, Bradlee and Freedley at quarter, the first three being the regular line-up in the games last year. Logan, another quarter, has also been worked in at the helm. Another combination that looked pretty good included Miller, Mahan and McKinlock with Cartmell at quarter, the freshmen backfield last year.

During the signal drill for the backs Brickley shifted with McKinlock, to give the second backfield the advantage of the experience of a veteran. Both combinations went through their stunts in pretty snappy order, handling the ball cleanly at all times, and keeping continually on their toes. These two points are great virtue in themselves and will go a long way towards turning out a stellar combination.

NO LINE ON MAKE-UP OF DACKS.

COMING down to brass tacks, however, it is a pretty hard task to attempt to forecast with any degree of certainty, the make-up of the varsity backfield. Mahan seems to be a first calibre man, but Bradlee, Brickley and Hardwick are of the same stuff and in addition have played together for a season. This is an important factor which should not be overlooked. With four such stars available, either Bradlee or Mahan may be placed at quarter, the one not chosen going into the carrying backfield. While Miller and McKinlock are both high class players they are not yet in a class with the others. There is lots of time, however, and a little seasoning may do worlds in bringing out their good points and showing them up as varsity performers.

BEST LINEMEN WORK APART FROM REST

THE most promising linemen, including Captain Storer, Hitchcock, Trumbull, Pennock, Weston, Lyman, Gilman, Cowen, Soucy and Townsend, the latter one of the latest men to report, have been cut off from the rest of the squad, and have been put through their stunts by Lothrop Withington, who is coaching linemen. Their work consists of the rudimentary drill of passing and falling on the ball, the crawl for teaching the men to keep low and strengthen their thighs, and the use of the charging machine. The men went at this machine so hard that they broke part of it. Speaks pretty well for so early in the season. The majority of these men seem to be in pretty good shape, particularly Soucy, who looks like the choice for centre with Wigglesworth probably out of the running. Soucy is not a very large man, but he's hard as nails, a scrapper from the word go, and he can keep close to the ground. He doesn't seem to find any trouble in pushing the coaches around and good work is looked for from him before the season is over. Lyman, who was a member of the freshman squad last year, is in trouble with the college office, and it is doubtful whether he will be able to get into action. While Harvard has her line practically intact, a host of subs for the guard and tackle positions will have to be broken in from practically green men. The material looks good, but for the most part it is still an unknown quantity, and the four coaches who are aiding in this particular phase of the work have no easy task ahead of them.

LEARY HAS CHARGE OF ENDS.

LEO LEARY is working hard with his squad of ends, the most promising of these men having been singled out as follows: Smith, Dana, Coolidge, O'Brien, Rollins, S. Curtis, Felton and Milholland, and their particular task at the present time is learning how to effectually block opposing tackles, and how to receive the forward pass. The mitts of most of the men are still buttery, but this will wear off with work. Gardiner, tackle on the 1911 team, who was laid out in the Princeton game that year, has not yet put in appearance. He is slated for the opposite end of the line from Frank O'Brien. There does not seem to be any who can very well oust these men from their positions, but all will be given plenty of opportunity to show their worth in the early games.

MAHAN A LITTLE NERVOUS YET.

PARTICULAR attention was paid today to the kicking of Hardwick and Mahan, the men who seem to have the call for this line of work. Hardwick is already punting in great form and during the first three days of work his kicks averaged from forty to fifty yards. Mahan seems nervous and while his kicks have been pretty, they have lacked distance and sometimes accuracy. Hardwick and Coach Haughton have been working with him and he shows a great deal of improvement in the short time he has been at work.

SCRIMMAGES NEXT WEEK.

THE squad is getting everything now in the rudimentary drill, and with the hardening process finished in a degree at the end of the week, scrimmages may be looked for the first of next week, and shortly secret practice.

While at times the creaking of the joints of the men can still be heard like the sounds of doors turning on many rusty hinges, most of this will be gone in a day or two and the men may sleep without swearing—no, you're wrong—without swearing that the beds are full of jagged rocks.

Everetts Bradley, one of the quarters who guided the big team against Yale last year, is out working with the squad for a couple of days, getting into shape for his task of coaching the Volkmann team.

NAPS HERE FOR FINAL SERIES WITH RED SOX

Joe Birmingham's Cleveland Naps, which not so long ago were considered a pennant possibility, tackle the Red Sox today in the first of a three-game series at Fenway Park. This series will be the final one with the Red Sox during 1913.

The Naps have just completed a very unsuccessful stretch of games with the Senators and Athletics and defeats have come so often that a beating at the hands of the Red Sox today and a victory for Washington over Detroit will crowd them out of the runner-up position, a place which they've held nearly all season.

It will be remembered when the Naps last visited this city their hopes ran high as the result of five straight victories over the Red Sox in three days. It is reasonable to believe, however, that they have lost some of the fight which marked their playing in that series and that they will meet an entirely different team in the Red Sox.

The two Western teams that preceded the Naps here were only able to get away with a single game and that victory went to Detroit.

For the opener today, it looks like "Dutch" Leonard for the Red Sox and Fred Blanding for Cleveland.

Two More Veterans Report at Exeter

EXETER, N. H., eSpt. 17.—Exeter's football squad is fast growing. "Eddie" Casey, last year's halfback, and "Cupe" Black, last year's tackle, have joined the team. The new material appears to be a tall, rangey lot, among the number being Kirkpatrick of Seattle, Wash., who was tried out at tackle; Welsh of Natick, Lowe of Arlington and LaRoché of Medford.

Work is yet in the rudimentary stages. Today Coach Jones will have the centres and quarterbacks out for work.

Brooks Meets Duffy Instead of Yelle

As Freddy Yelle, the Taunton lightweight, and Terry Brooks of New York could not agree on the weight conditions the match between them was dropped by the Lowell A. C. directors. In place of Yelle Freddy Duffy, the Jamaica Plain lightweight, has been secured, and Lowell sports feel that their meeting will result in as good, if not a better, contest taan one in which Yelle would work against Brooks. Duffy and Brooks have met before in a twelve-round contest, resulting in a draw.

Joe Rivers to Box Cross Next Month

LOS ANGELES, Cal., Sept. 17.—It was announced here that negotiations for a twenty-round bout between Leach Cross and Joe Rivers, lightweights, at Vernon, October 7 or 14, virtually had been completed. Cross and Rivers twice have battled to a draw.

This will be the first boxing contest at Vernon since the Jess Willard-John Young match, which was followed by the latter's death.

Plan Big Reception for James E. Sullivan

NEW YORK, Sept. 17.—Plans were made today for a big public reception to James E. Sullivan, leader of the A. A. U., who returns to this city on Friday on the liner Cedric from Europe, where he spent the last month with an international committee framing rules for the future Olympic games.

Sidelights on Sports

By A. H. C. MITCHELL

THE Red Sox ought to feel humiliated at the easy manner in which opposing teams steal home on them. All the visiting clubs take a whack at this trick, and they all turn it successfully. If the other fellows have a man on third and feel in the mood to score a run there is nothing easier at Fenway Park than to jog to the plate and chalk up a tally. This little game has been worked so often on the Red Sox this year that if the opponents do not steal home at least once a game the spectators feel that they are not getting their money's worth.

IT doesn't seem to make much difference what pitcher is in the box for the Red Sox. They all look alike to the visiting purloiners of the plate. Of course, with one or two Boston pitchers all that the opposing base-walker needs is a brisk jaunt from third to the rubber, but in these cases the burglar must be careful not to stub his toe, for if he does it may be necessary for him to hurry.

WHILE all the Red Sox pitchers are easy, it is the general opinion that "Dutch" Leonard is the softest snap of the lot. With Leonard in the box, the man on third has time to take a chew of tobacco, manicure his nails, pull up his trousers, adjust his cap, tighten his belt one hole, fall down, roll over, play a game of seven up, pass the time of day with a friend in the tenth row of the grandstand, smoke a cigarette and saunter toward the plate. He will have scored and be half way to the dugout before Leonard has finished winding up.

THERE is a particular favor, however, that, on behalf of the Red Sox, we would ask of the visiting American League teams. It is this: Please don't muss up our catchers. If you care to steal home, just walk leisurely to the plate, and then go on about your business. No one will try to stop you. There is no necessity of sliding in. Besides soiling your baseball pants, there is the chance that our catcher, who is waiting for our pitcher to hurl the ball, might be in the way. Also, it nearly always happens that when sliding home the rubber becomes covered with dirt. In this case, it is necessary for the umpire to sweep it off, and this puts him to considerable trouble. This delays the game, and, as a natural sequence, annoys the spectators.

IT is possible that visiting teams can make an amicable arrangement with the Red Sox in regard to stealing home. We are not authorized to say this officially, mind you, but we believe that the home team would consent to the following plan:

With a base-walker on third, let him announce to all whom it may concern that he is about to steal home. "Wisey," the manipulator of the megaphone, will make the announcement public. Then let the batsman, the catcher and the umpire stand aside while the base-walker trots to the plate. It must be thoroughly understood, however, that he must TROT, not walk. If he stops to read the newspapers or delays the game in any way, he loses ten points in his batting average.

OH, yes! We almost forgot to mention that Gloomy Gus Williams was the visiting player that stole home yesterday. In the eighth inning Bedient gave him a free ticket to first. He took second on an out, third on another out and nonchalantly jogged across the plate, while the Red Sox looked on. They were not surprised in any way. They are too used to it.

If you would surprise the Red Sox, DON'T steal home.

THE run scored by Williams tied it up, and the crew of Carrigan were not able to untie it until the last of the ninth. This gave Speaker a chance to drive in the winning run. And he did it beautifully. With runners on second and third, he slashed a hot single through short and Hooper walked in. Tris continues to bat like a fiend. In five times up yesterday he made three safeties and was robbed out of another by Silk O'Loughlin. Silk left town last night, so we say "robbed" with impunity. It was a hard hit ball that nearly knocked Austin over. The acting manager of the Browns, however, recovered the ball and shot it to first. It looked to everyone except O'Loughlin that Speaker beat the throw by a step, but Silk jerked his thumb in the air, and that settled it. That was Speaker's first time at bat. In the third inning he passed the ball to the left field banking for two bases, scoring Lewis from first. In the fifth he drove the ball to right, and it looked good for three bases, but Shotten, by a remarkable sprint, just got to it. In the seventh inning Speaker cracked a single to centre, but was caught napping off first. For the windup he hit safely to left, scoring the winning run. Every hit was a solid one.

PLEASE do not lose sight of the fact that the Red Sox have won eighteen out of the last twenty-four games played. There is not a team in the country that has done better. And this without the services of Joe Wood, their premier pitcher.

REMARK by President McAleer, after Williams has sneaked home with the tieing run:

"In St. Louis one day Mike Kahoe, who couldn't beat a snail in a fifty-yard race, stole home on Bill Dineen. Bill was so mad that his neck swelled up to the bursting point, and his face grew as red as a boiled lobster."

BEDIENT'S exhibition was not of the best. He was in bad at the start of nearly every inning. Catcher Thomas had an off day, too. The mitt he used seemed too small for him.

300 Derry "Fans" Will Honor Tyler

Things are moving along smoothly in the direction of a fine demonstration at Walpole street grounds on September 30, when George Tyler, the popular left-hander of the Pilgrims, will be tendered a "day."

The attraction will be great also in so far as the Giants will be on the card to play their final game in Boston for the 1913 season. Tyler will pitch against the New Yorkers.

Dr. L. S. Downing of Derry, N. H., who has charge of the "Tyler Day" celebration for the fans of that town, says that about 300 rooters will come down from Derry. A special train has been arranged for, and fans from Lowell and Manchester are getting busy to join in.

CHICAGO, Sept. 17.—The Boston Pilgrims open a three days' engagement with the Chicago Cubs here today.

This is the last visit of the Boston team to this city, and naturally interest centres in its season's work against the Cubs. Although the Chicago team is securely planted in third place, Boston has been one of the hardest teams that it has had to contend with this season. The Cubs have won eleven out of the nineteen games played thus far, but the Pilgrims have strong hopes of getting even before they leave. In order to do this they must win all three games.

Otto Hess, who was prepared to pitch the final game against the Pirates if it had been played, will work in the opener today, probably, against Jim Vaughn or Larry Cheney. The former, a Yankee castoff, has won all of his games since his return to big company, and only the other day let down the Dodgers with a single hit.

Manager Stallings expects a couple of recruits to join the team here today. Pitcher Cochran is due from Topeka, Kan., where he just finished a very successful season in the Western League, and "Hank" Gowdy, once before with the Boston team, will come from Buffalo. Gowdy is a catcher.

Teams Play for Inter-City Title

The Lincoln team has won the championship of the Somerville City League, and the Prospect Unions, by defeating the strong Auburn team, are the undisputed champions of Cambridge.

Next Saturday afternoon, on Somerville Field, these two teams meet to settle the championship of the two cities. The feeling between Cambridge and Somerville in all athletic contests is one of intense rivalry. The Lincoln Club has won eight games and lost none, a record which Manager Duggan may well feel proud of.

The Prospect Unions have had a very successful season. They have many star players, and expect to take a crowd of over 2,000 people from their city to cheer them on to victory. The Mayors of both cities have been invited to attend the game.

Sale of Pitcher to Reds Declared Void

CINCINNATI, O., Sept. 17.—The National Commission set aside the sale of Pitcher Cy Morgan of the Kansas City (American Association) club to the Cincinnati club, and ordered that the latter be reimbursed for any expense it had gone to in securing the player.

Manager Carr of the Kansas City club and Morgan himself testified that his arm was not in condition when ordered to report to Cincinnati.

Quite a few minorm atters were also considered by the commission, but no findings were announced. The commission adjourned sine die at the conclusion of the Morgan matter.

GOLFERS OFF IN SECOND
QUALIFICATION ROUND
[illegible] OPEN TITLE TOURNEY

Strong Field Starts in Title Golf Play

Large Galleries Follow the Players in Second Qualification Round

By H. P. FARRINGTON.

Just a glance at the list of eighty odd [illegible] competitive field [illegible] qualification test of [illegible] golf championship will [illegible] the field is stronger than the one that played in the opening round over the [illegible] course in [illegible] Park.

[illegible] AMERICAN [illegible] first round would [illegible] higher than the [illegible] as to the [illegible] championship [illegible] Francis [illegible] had [illegible] of their opponent [illegible].

Vardon's playing more than fulfills the [illegible] and liable [illegible] for [illegible] of the [illegible] play of Ouimet [illegible] shows that the [illegible] can play golf with the best talent in the country and not be found wanting.

Big Galleries Follow Players.

Tremendous galleries followed the [illegible] players in the opener, and more [illegible] were at [illegible] bright and early [illegible] anxious to sort out after [illegible] first tee and [illegible] every stroke [illegible] to the last putt on the green.

Two players who started early missed [illegible] have been theirs had [illegible] breakfast [illegible] and Karl [illegible] Royal [illegible] at 8:10 and [illegible] may sur[illegible] some who [illegible] know their [illegible].

At five minutes of nine Jerome D [illegible] champion [illegible] They [illegible] following which was added [illegible] the round progressed.

At 9:30 J. J. McDermott [illegible] and H. H. Walter, a [illegible] Massachusetts amateur, started [illegible] of admirers fol[illegible] in this [illegible] McDermott [illegible] expected [illegible] confid[illegible] best [illegible] way.

Crowd Out to See Ray.

[illegible] and Jack [illegible] following [illegible] McDermott [illegible] drawing [illegible] strength [illegible] drawing [illegible] was [illegible] P. M. Barnes [illegible] and [illegible] own with [illegible].

At 9:55 [illegible] few followers as the [illegible] in the past that [illegible] a strong [illegible] the matches to [illegible] flying machine as [illegible] enthusiastic herd [illegible] of golf [illegible] could [illegible].

[illegible] and the [illegible] cocoa[illegible] at 10:30 Patrick [illegible] Ben Nicholls, the only [illegible] in 1900 stepped [illegible] together.

Leith Should Qualify.

[illegible] Leith of Duluth, the former [illegible] who had trouble [illegible] entry [illegible] was sup[illegible] first round [illegible] he [illegible] to the non[illegible] of his name in the schedule [illegible] and [illegible] qualify.

The betting for today shows that the bookers on expect better scoring than was seen yesterday. They may be disappointed, but scores of 164 or better will be found when some of the best players have handed in totals for two rounds.

Those who tie or are better than 32nd place today will be drawn with the 32 who qualified yesterday for the 72 holes medal play which will decide the fate of contestants in the 1913 event.

A [illegible] from across the water stated that there was $5,000 waiting in London to be placed at odds of one to two on Edward Ray and Vardon against the field for championship honors this year. This shows what the English think of their two representatives, for the odds are at least ten to one against either of them, and naturally five to one would be considered a good bet on any individual.

Ouimet Score Should Stand.

Despite the number of first-class amateurs in today's draw, it is improbable that any of them will improve on Ouimet's card. The showing of the amateurs in the first round was most satisfactory, and if the same proportion in today's play do as well, the tourney will have many interesting phases to follow as the event progresses.

Big Trinity Squad Starts Training

LAKE DUNMORE, Vt., Sept. 17.—[illegible] Raymond G. Gettell is here with Trinity's football squad, accompanied by Manager Edward J. Myers. The entire Fall training is being done with headquarters at the Lake Dunmore [illegible]. The party will not return to Hartford until September 23.

Only one freshman, Coffee, who has a reputation made at St. Albans Preparatory School, was taken on the training trip.

The following are the players here today:

Hudson, '14, fullback; Sage, '14, quarterback; Howell, '15, tackle; Kinney, '15, centre; Smith, '1[illegible], end; Cole, '16, end; Lambert, '16, tackle; Moore, '14, guard; Castator, '16, guard; Coffee, '17, [illegible], and Wessels, Ives, Wooley and Meyer, substitutes.

Boston Boys Out for Amherst Team

AMHERST, Sept. 17.—The largest football squad in the history of Aggie has reported to Coach Brides. Seventy men are here and more are expected today. Captain Brewer drilled a small squad in drop kicking and a [illegible] dummy was used for the first time.

Several Greater Boston boys are among the new men from the freshmen class. John Noyes, a former captain of Chelsea High, Westman, tackle at Mechanic Arts, and Edwards from Salem should all develop into fast players.

N. E. ATHLETES IN CANADIAN TITLE GAMES

By THOMAS J. HALPIN.

Owing to the large amount of new business transacted at the annual meeting of the New England Amateur Athletic Association, the officials of that body were unable to take up the matter of sending a team of athletes from this section of the country to compete in the Eastern Canadian championships, which will be held in Montreal Saturday.

The B. A. A. got in touch with the newly elected president, Alfred Lill, who promised them he would take a mail vote on the question. From the report of the president it is quite likely that at least six athletes will be sent by the New England body, while the Unicorn club will also send six athletes, making a total of twelve in all.

Of the men who are now available the Back Bay club will give the largest number. It is doubtful if Howard Drew will go. The only other athlete who would be [illegible] is [illegible] the shot putter from Fort Warren, who is now competing under [illegible] newly formed Irish-American [illegible] will make an effort to [illegible] of the remaining members of [illegible] selected, but with the exception of [illegible] none of them are in championship class at the present time.

The B. A. A. probably will be represented by Harry Birwise in the running high jump, James Power in the one-mile run, Joe Silva in the three-mile run and possibly Oliver Johnstone, the Harvard high jumper.

It is impossible to see how this section of the country [illegible] able to obtain twelve athletes who will be able to cope with the best in the Canadian provinces, for they will encounter hard competition.

The best athletes across the border will compete and among the men who will be Tressider Bros. and Phillips. All of these men are champions in their different events. Tressider is one of the greatest quarter and half-milers ever developed in the Dominion. G. V. Brown will have charge of the New England representatives.

New Yorkers May Build Cup Defender

NEW YORK, Sept. 17.—It was reported here today that another syndicate composed of millionaire New York yachtsmen had been formed for the purpose of building a yacht to compete with any other entry in the elimination races to find the sloop that will defend America's cup against Sir Thomas Lipton's challenger.

This new syndicate was said to include George F. Baker, Frederick G. Bourne, C. Oliver Iselin and others. They hope to induce Nat Herreshoff to accept a commission from them.

Kilbane had an advantage in each of the twelve rounds. He did his best work in the last four rounds of the contest when he rocked Walsh with slashing left and right hand punches.

Climax in Tenth Round

The climax of the bout was reached in the [illegible] to [illegible] Walsh [illegible] upper[illegible].

Kilbane tried hard to end the bout by a knockout, but the round soon ended and Walsh was "saved."

[illegible]

From then until the tenth round Kilbane continued to increase his lead. Walsh was fighting on the defensive practically all of the time. Kilbane was willing to mix, but Walsh was evidently afraid to take any chances with the Cleveland youth.

A THRILLING STORY OF A MODERN MONTE CRISTO

One of the Most Exciting Tales Ever Written—the Vivid Story of a Poor Boy Who Is Suddenly Given Enormous Wealth Through an Almost Miraculous Event

Begin This Great Story Today

FIRST INSTALMENT.

(Copyright, 1904, by Edward J. Clode.

No. 3, Johnson's Mews

"Is there no hope, doctor?

"Absolutely none—now."

"If she had gone to the—the workhouse infirmary—would she have have lived?"

The doctor paused. The gulp before that hateful word was not lost on him. He tried professional severity and bestowed some care on the buttoning of a glove.

"I am surprised," he said, "that an excellent woman like your mother should encourage your feelings of—er—repugnance toward— Confound it, boy, have you no relatives or friends?"

"No, sir. We are alone in the world."

"And hard up, eh?"

The boy dug a hand into a pocket with the stolid indifference of despair. He produced two shillings and some pennies. He picked out the silver, and the man reddened in protest.

"Don't be stupid, Philip. That is your name, is it not? When I want my fee I will ask for it. Your mother needs a nurse, wine, chicken broth. You are old enough to realize that a doctor practicing in a neighborhood like this might want such things himself and whistle for them. But in the [illegible] infirmary they are provided by the State."

"Would my mother have lived if she consented to be taken there [illegible] ago?"

Again the man wondered at the [illegible] persistence of the questioner, a fearless-looking, active boy of fifteen, attired in worn clothes too small for him, and wearing an old pair of boots several sizes too large. The strong, young face, pinched with vigils and privation, the large, earnest eyes, heavy with unshed tears, the lips quivering in their resolute compression over a chin that indicated great strength of character, appealed far more to the doctor than the whimpering terror with which the children of the poor usually meet the grim vision of death.

The wrestle with the glove ceased and a kindly hand rested on Philip's shoulder.

"No," came the quiet answer. "May God help you, she would not have lived."

"God does not help anybody," was the amazing retort.

The doctor was shocked, visibly so.

"That is a foolish and wicked statement," he said, sternly. "Do not let your mother hear such awful words. She has lived and will die a true Christian. I have never met a woman of greater natural charm and real piety. She has suffered so much that she merits the eternal. It is a reward, not a punishment. Cast away these terrible thoughts; go rather and kneel by her side in prayer."

THE COMMAND

For an instant the great brown eyes blazed fiercely at him.

"Am I to pray that my mother shall be taken from me?"

"Even that if it is [illegible] will."

The [illegible] passed [illegible] to utter helplessness. The boy again brought forth his tiny store of [illegible].

"Surely," he said, "I can buy some small amount of wine [illegible] shops they sell things in tins that make [illegible] broth, don't they? I have a [illegible] a kettle. Would you mind [illegible] me?"

"There, there!" [illegible] mother a [illegible] to carry [illegible] I will see what I can do. [illegible] Would you argue with me? Go at once. I insist. Listen, she is calling for you."

In that poor tenement there were [illegible]. A rickety staircase, crouched against the retaining wall of the [illegible] living room on the ground floor, led steeply to an apartment above, a [illegible] in an [illegible] that suggests a [illegible]. The walls, roughly paneled, were [illegible] provided with [illegible] pegs. The back door was fastened with a latch [illegible] London [illegible]. The front window looked out [illegible] a heavy paved [illegible] by [illegible]. A [illegible] window at the back [illegible] yard darkened by [illegible] to sweep away the rains.

The boy heard [illegible] whisper [illegible]

The [illegible] the waxen pallor, the [illegible] of dilapidated skin and [illegible] of the eyes, gave her [illegible] appearance. This [illegible] of death in life accentu[illegible] the [illegible] between mother [illegible] son [illegible] was sharply out[illegible] and in the fading light of a M[illegible] day the difference between [illegible] tokens of approaching collapse [illegible] effects of [illegible] youth was not [illegible]

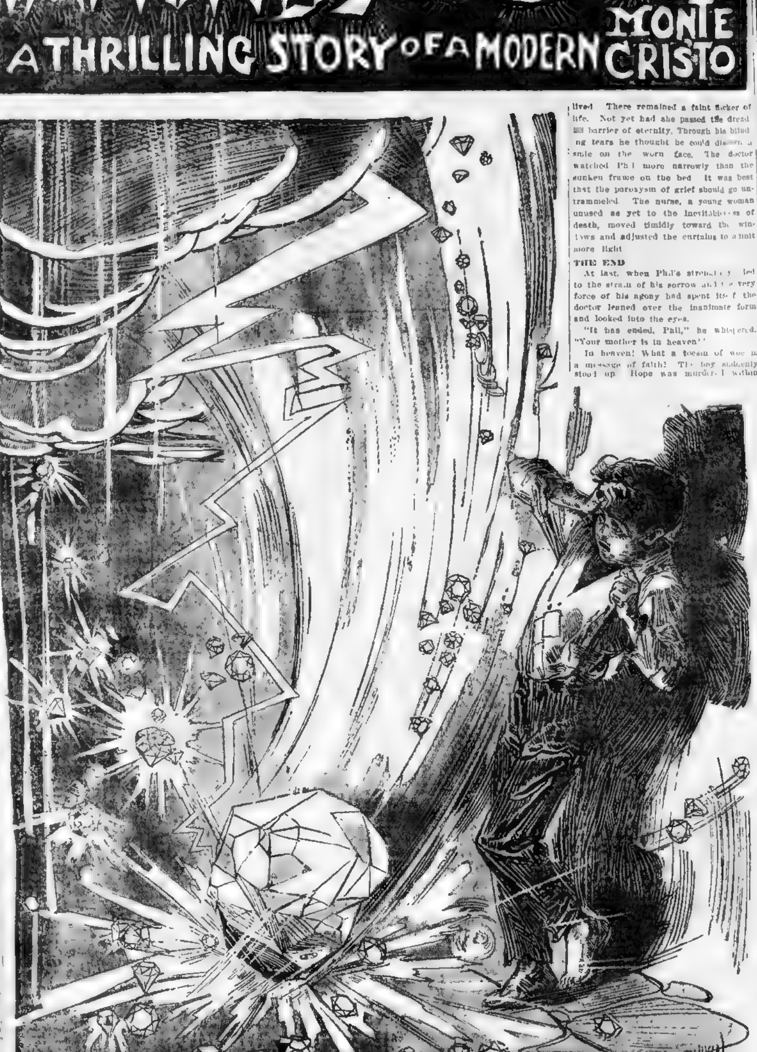
"So you are trying to hoodwink me, Phil, for the first time. I know what the doctor said. He told you that I could not recover and that I had not long to live; in a word, that I am dying."



A Fortune from the Heavens.

(A pictorial phantasy of the manner in which the boy hero of this great story suddenly finds himself possessed of fabulous wealth through the falling of a meteor composed almost solidly of diamonds).

Then the boy gave way entirely. He flung himself down by the side of the bed and [illegible] the coverlet.

"Oh, mother [illegible]

[illegible]

"M[illegible] boy, we must [illegible] We have indeed [illegible] more than I, [illegible] of perfect [illegible] and a [illegible] you have been [illegible] misery at an [illegible] opening before [illegible] of a successful [illegible]

Promise me, darling, that you will resign yourself to the decrees of Providence even in the bitter hour of our parting."

LAST WORDS

Her voice failed. Tears stood in her eyes. The knowledge came to her anew that natural emotions can at times conquer all restraints. The maternity strong within her clamored for the power to shield her offspring from the dangers [illegible] would beset him. There was a [illegible] pain in the thought that a few brief hours or minutes might unclasp her arms from him forever.

It was Phil who first gave utterance to the wild protest in their souls.

"Mother," he mourned, bitterly, "I don't want to live without you. Let us die together. If you cannot stay with me, then I swear—"

But a scream of terror so [illegible] and vehement that it seemed to be almost miraculous from so frail a form, froze the vow on his lips.

"Phil! What are you saying? Oh, my son, my son, do not break my heart before I die. Kiss me, dearest. I am cold. I can scarce see you. Come nearer. Let me look once more into your brave eyes. You will be a great man, Phil. I know it. Who should know your character like your mother? But you must have faith in God always. I have prayed for you, and my prayers will surely be answered. I will watch over you. If you are in danger my spirit will be quick to cross the void. We cannot be parted. Oh, God, it is impossible. You are the life of my life. I am not dead while you still live."

Even as she spoke, her left hand and arm, hitherto untouched by the helpless invalid during many weary months, became numb and rigid. She was dying now, not with the struggle against the king of terrors which often marks the passing of humanity, but with a slow torpidity more akin to sleep.

Her brain was clear, but the stock of nervous force had sunk so low that her few remaining words were spoken with difficulty. They were mostly endearing expressions, appeals to her loved one to hope and pray, to trust steadfastly in the all-wise power that would direct his destiny. With that the last flicker of existence the maternal instinct became dominant again and she asked him not to forget her.

The boy could only murmur agonized appeals to the merciless unseen not to rob him of the only being he held dear on earth, but even in that awful moment he had the strength to cease his frantic protests when they seemed to cause her pain, and he forced himself to join her in prayer.

When the doctor brought a nurse and some small store of the much needed delicacies, Mrs. Anson was already unconscious.

The boy, aroused from frenzy by the steps on the stairs, shrieked incoherently.

"I have killed my mother. See! She is dead. I killed her. I made her cry. You told me to look after her until you returned. She cried and screamed because I spoke so wildly. It is all my fault. I—"

"Hush! Your mother is not dead, but dying. Not all the skill of man can save her. Let her die in peace."

No other words could have checked the wild torrent of lament that surged from that wounded heart. So she still lived. There remained a faint flicker of life. Not yet had she passed the dread barrier of eternity. Through his blinding tears he thought he could discern a smile on the worn face. The doctor watched Phil more narrowly than the sunken frame on the bed. It was best that the paroxysm of grief should go untrammeled. The nurse, a young woman unused as yet to the inevitableness of death, moved timidly toward the windows and adjusted the curtains to admit more light.

THE END

At last, when Phil's strength yielded to the strain of his sorrow and the very force of his agony had spent itself, the doctor leaned over the inanimate form and looked into the eyes.

"It has ended, Phil," he whispered. "Your mother is in heaven."

In heaven! What a tocsin of woe in a message of faith! The boy suddenly stood up. Hope was murdered within him. His tears ceased and his labored breathing came under control with a mighty effort. He stooped and kissed the pale cheeks twice.

"Good-by, mother," he said, and the dull pain in his voice was so heart-rending that the nurse's sympathies mastered her. She burst out crying. Professional instinct came to the doctor's aid. He sharply reprimanded the half-hysterical woman and sent her on an errand to bring those whose duty it is to render the last services to frail mortality. The boy he led downstairs. He was a busy man, with many claims on his time, but this strange youngster interested him, and he resolved to turn the boy's thoughts forcibly away from the all-absorbing horror of his mother's death.

THE world sat up for twenty-four hours to watch the progress of that projectile flying through the depths of the earth. O'Malley brought them into Bermuda only two minutes behind their schedule. The work of changing engines and testing was expedited to pick up this loss, and the train shot out under the bed of the Atlantic on time.

Fayal was reached five minutes and forty seconds late, and when Allan turned on the power and darted forward again with a grumble and roar they were still three minutes behind time.

O'Malley stood beside him, in case of accidents, and hardly a word was spoken. He kept his eyes on the face of his chief in wonder and perplexity. Allan seemed to have grown young again, but there was a troubled look in the hooded eyes that gazed, unwinking, up the long perspective, and a grim gray look about the mouth. He did not seem to be conscious of O'Malley's presence. When the latter addressed him, making pertinent comments on their speed, only the barest nod indicated that he had heard.

When his watch and the marks on the stations told him that they were approaching the Channel, O'Malley burst into a yelp of joy.

"By the eternal!" he roared. "I believe you'll bring us in on time, chief!"

He was so excited now that he paid no heed to Allan's apathy. At every mark he let out yells of joy, and glued his eyes to the chronometers as if to hold them back [illegible] force of will.

By Anna Katharine Green

One of the Greatest Mystery Stories Ever Written

TODAY'S INSTALLMENT

Copyright, 1913, by Anna Katharine Green.

"FOR more than one person at Mrs. Olney's boarding house remembers the day when a private carriage drove up to the house and an elegant lady, closely veiled, descended and made her way without inquiry to Mrs. Farley's room, with the ostensible purpose of having a dress fitted. But her stay lengthened into hours, and much wonderment was created. Nor was this the only time she came. More than once during Mrs. Farley's illness her carriage was seen in front of the house, and once after Mrs. Farley died. But she never again remained beyond proper limits and the gossip which the first had created soon died out for the want of fuel to feed it."

There was silence; Mr. Gryce had evidently finished his story. With an effort the doctor roused himself, eyed the narrator and asked in a strange tone that of itself awakened anew the detective's interest:

"Do you know if she ever met Dr. Molesworth in any of these visits she paid her mother?"

It was a new note sounded. Mr. Gryce recognized this fact, and for a moment looked not only thoughtful, but inquisitive; then he shook his head and somewhat equivocally replied:

"We have not got to the end of our inquiries yet."

"Then," was the doctor's grim conclusion, "this discovery that my wife was sister to the girl who died in her room has not satisfied you that she was innocent of her death?"

"It has made the theory of suicide seem less improbable. While it is hard to imagine that a seamstress would be initiated into the secrets of Miss Gretorex's jewel case, a sister might. Yet—"

"You are not perfectly satisfied," finished the doctor, "difficult as it is to discover a motive for murder, and simple as it is to see that of suicide."

"I am ready to be made so," the detective suggested. "I ask nothing better than to have my mind cleared of every doubt concerning one whose situation is so pitiful, and who holds so close a relationship to yourself. As proof of it I am willing to talk over probabilities with you for another half hour. For instance, do you think her dread of having you learn her true parentage was enough to account for the extreme suffering which blanched her hair in a night and laid her in a state of insensibility at our feet?"

The doctor was silent.

LOOK ALMOST FATHERLY

Mr. Gryce's look and tone became almost fatherly.

"I have seen much of life," he pursued, "and much of women. Forced by my business into scenes trying to every faculty of their mind and emotional nature, it has been my lot to behold them in their love, their hate, their triumph, and their despair, and I have found that, though they can feign much, conceal much, bear much, they succumb only when they own a frightful secret and can see no way of hiding it any longer. Such a secret I believe your wife to hold, and till you can name it by some other name than that of murder, I must continue to think she was the occasion, intentionally or unintentionally, of Mildred Farley's death."

If this language and the whole general conduct shown by the detective at this crisis was a scheme on his part to get a truth he otherwise feared to miss, he was certainly successful; for no sooner had these words passed his lips than the doctor's face lost the peculiar look it had hitherto worn, and with a start he vehemently cried:

"Well, I will give it a name. At the sacrifice of every particle of pride left me after the scourging process to which I have been subjected, I will tell you what that secret is. To save her I could scarcely do more, and yet to her I would willingly give my life."

"Let me hear it," answered the detective. "If it is a secret that can be kept without violation of our duty, be assured that no one beside the inspector and myself shall ever know it."

Dr. Cameron looked at the detective and said slowly:

"Do you know why the woman we saw through the curtain at the C—— Hotel, looked so astonishingly like my wife that we found it impossible to suppose her to be anyone else?"

Mr. Gryce smiled.

"Why, I have just told you," said he. "She was Mildred Farley, your wife's twin sister, and as like her."

"You mistake," was the dry interruption. "She whom we saw that day was not Mildred Farley but Genevieve Gretorex; in other words my wife herself, or she who afterward became so."

SLEEP DISTURBING BLADDER WEAKNESS BACKACHE-RHEUMATISM, QUICKLY VANISH

Even Most Chronic Sufferers Find Relief From Few Doses of Croxone

Croxone soon relieves such conditions because it reaches the very roots of the disease. It soaks right into the stopped up, inactive kidneys, through the walls and linings; cleans out the little filtering cells and glands; neutralizes and dissolves the poisonous uric acid substances that lodge in the joints and muscles to scratch and irritate and cause rheumatism; heals the inflamed membranes of the bladder, and cleans out and strengthens the stopped up, lifeless kidneys so they can filter and sift all the poisons from the blood, and drive it out of the system.

So sure, so positive, so quick and lasting are the results obtained from the use of Croxone, that three doses a day for a few days are often all that is required to end the worst backache, regulate the most annoying bladder disorders and overcome the numerous other similar conditions.

Croxone is so prepared that it is practically impossible to take it without results.

An original package costs but a trifle, and all druggists are authorized to return the purchase price if Croxone fails to give desired results, regardless of how old you are, how long you have suffered, or what else has failed.

THE AMERICAN'S MAGAZINE PAGE

A Bachelor's Diary

By MAX

AUGUST 30.—(Being in the form of a supposititious dialogue between Sally Spencer and myself. She is away off in Paris, absorbed in the vanities of this world, and I am a helpless invalid, confined to a cottage in the northernmost woods of this country, with much time to reflect on the probabilities of my rewards or punishments in the next. The imaginary Sally is sitting in the little low rocker that sways emptily with the wind, back and forth, on the porch beside me in that tantalizingly suggestive way that empty rockers have.

SALLY: "I can stay only a short time, Max. I had to wait a few minutes in the Bon Marche for a fitting, and thought I would make a mental visit with you while waiting. How are you, my dear? You look like a mummy with all those blankets and rugs around you, but not as sick as I had expected. Perhaps that pretty nurse you have written so much about is prolonging your illness with a motive."

MAX: "It is possible that the motive is on my side."

SALLY: "You don't mean to say, Max, that you have become such an imbecile that you condemn yourself to cushions and calomel and airbags for the pleasure you get in having some silly girl wipe your face and hands and look solicitous when you sigh, and comb your hair and tell you what a fine-shaped head you have, and hold your hands every time you have an imaginary pain? Max, I am ashamed of you!"

MAX: "You are losing your tact. The right way to talk to a man when he is sick is to call him a martyr and a hero instead of an imbecile."

SALLY: "I suppose that's the sort of soothing syrup that nurse hands to you? I see it is time I came home from Paris and took you in charge. How many, many times, are you going to make it necessary for me to save you from other women?"

MAX: "Save me for whom?"

IT STOPS

(The rocker, which had swayed rapidly when the imaginary Sally was scolding me, stopped short. There is a silence. Then it begins to sway again, but the imaginary Sally has turned her head so that I cannot see her face, and she changes the subject when she begins talking.)

SALLY: "I suppose you know that Jack is with me in Paris? That means I have something more to do than to match ribbons and laces. The widow is there, too."

MAX: "You did not say for whom you want to save me?"

SALLY: "I am most cordial with her. So cordial and so delighted when I hear Jack is with her that he is growing suspicious. He asked me this morning when dressing for breakfast if I was growing tired of him and wanted to get rid of him."

MAX: "Do you?"

SALLY: "I hope you will be satisfied with the Winter clothes I bought for Manette. They cost more than ever before, but the child is no longer a baby to be confined to the company of her nurse and governess, and must dress better. You will laugh when I tell you there is a party dress——"

MAX: "I don't care what you bought. I never care. It doesn't interest me and never has, and you know I never look at the bills. The nurse says——"

SALLY: "And I don't care what the nurse says. I think it very unkind in you, Max, to quote that nurse to me when I have such a short time to stay. I have a good notion to come back home and discharge her. You are able to travel now, and can be taken home where Richards and Tompkins and I can nurse you, or get a man nurse for that matter."

NO MEN WANTED

MAX: "I don't want a man nurse. There would be none of that delightful sense of danger with a man nurse, and I refuse to have one. Fancy me getting lonely in the long hours of the night and calling to my nurse to come and sit beside me and smooth my forehead and hold my hand, and having a great big ugly whiskered man appear! I won't have it! I am sick, and sick people always have what they want, and I want my pretty nurse. I think you are very selfish, Sally, to begrudge me the only compensation sickness affords a man—a sympathy that demands no chaperon."

(The rocker stopped swinging back and forth. The imaginary Sally is looking away off into the woods, but I fancy she doesn't see the royal color of scarlet and gold the trees have put on. Perhaps there are tears in her eyes, and the colors she sees seem rain-draggled. She turns, and when she speaks again her voice is low, and has a note of helplessness in it that distresses me.)

SALLY: "It is all a tangle, my life and Jack's and yours. I have tried so hard to be good, Max, but with a husband who strays after every new petticoat, and whom I can't love without compelling myself to love him, and with the man I do love throwing himself away on a woman who can never care for him as I have cared for years—why, Max, I—I don't know what to do!"

(It is my turn to look at the trees without seeing their beauty. It seems to me now that all I saw was a little narrow path that wound in and out among the gold-flecked shadows of the woods, and that lost itself somewhere in their depths. It would be fine to take Sally by the hand, and lead her down that path and never know its ending! I am interrupted in my musings by a sudden movement by Sally. She has risen, and has come to me, and has thrown her arms around my neck, and is kissing me in the manner of which I have often dreamed. Good men are good also in their dreams. But are there any good men?

HE WONDERS

SALLY: "I won't give you up! I kept the widow from marrying you, and I warn you I will keep the pretty nurse from getting you if I have to go to the limit. I want you for myself. I have wanted you for years. Every hour of the day and night I have thought only of you, though everyone believed I was such a devoted wife. I deceived even you! I haven't been good in my thoughts, but no woman who doesn't love her husband is good in her thoughts. It is impossible, Max! I don't love my husband, and I do love you, and I know!"

A clock in Mrs. Allen's dining room strikes, and even when a woman is making love to a man she can't keep a dressmaker waiting. Evidently it reminded my dream visitor of the garment waiting a fitting in the Bon Marche, for before it had ceased striking the hour Sally was gone.

But I wonder if she is that kind of a Sally in her thoughts.

Thin Folks Who, Would Be Fat

Increase in Weight 10 Pounds or More

A Physician's Advice

"I'd certainly give most anything to be able to fat up a few pounds and stay that way," declares every excessively thin man or woman. Such result is not impossible, despite past failures. Thin people are victims of mal-nutrition, a condition which prevents the fatty elements of food from being taken up by the blood as they are when the powers of nutrition are normal. Instead of getting into the blood, all the fat and flesh producing elements stay in the intestines until they pass from the body as waste.

To correct this condition and to produce a healthy, normal amount of fat the nutritive processes must be artificially supplied with the power which nature has denied them. This can best be accomplished by eating a Sargol tablet with every meal. Sargol is a scientific combination of six of the best strength-giving, fat-producing elements known to the medical profession. Taken with meals, it mixes with the food and turns the sugars and starches into rich, ripe nourishment for the tissues and blood and its rapid effect is remarkable. Reported gains of from ten to twenty-five pounds in a single month are by no means infrequent. Yet its action is perfectly natural and absolutely harmless. Sargol is sold by good druggists everywhere and every package contains a guarantee of weight increase or money back.

Caution:—While Sargol has produced remarkable results in the treatment of nervous indigestion and general stomach disorders, it should not, owing to its remarkable flesh producing effect, be used by those who are not willing to increase their weight ten pounds or more.

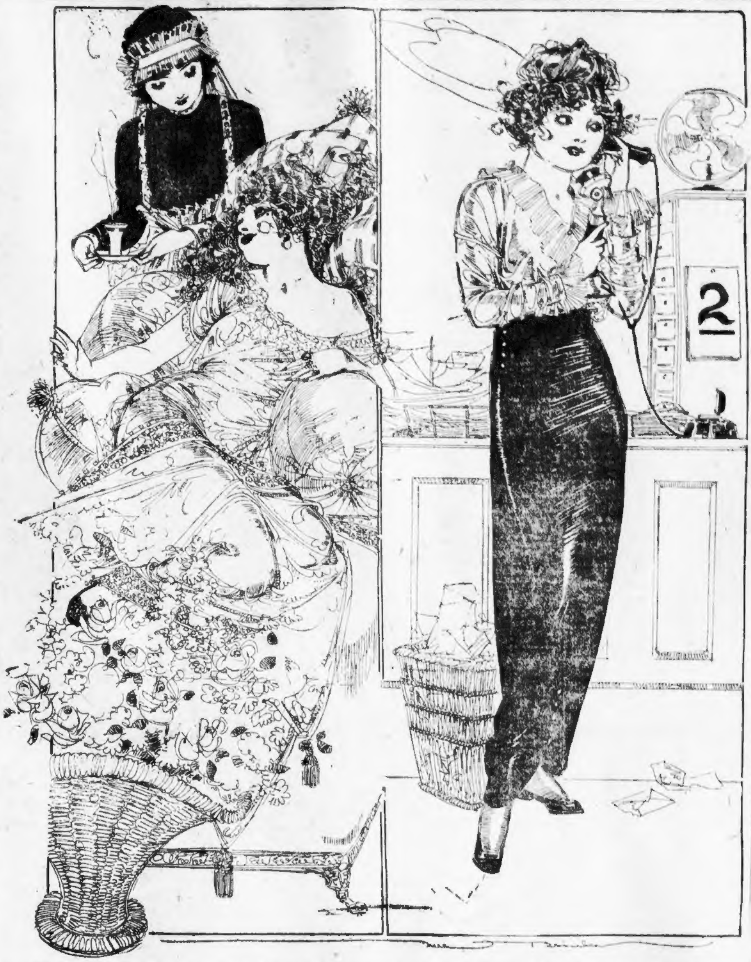
A Business Girl

By NELL BRINKLEY

Copyright, 1913, by International News Service



HERE in my inky fist I hold a letter on severe, business-like paper from one of the valiant army of girls who do battle in Boston town shoulder to shoulder with the men. It's rather different from the one I hold in the other hand—an odorous little gray note, lined with delicate tissue as thin as tulle and breathing sandal seed when I ripped it open. The one is plain and square and typed, smelling of just clean air, the very sign and symbol of the trim, black-and-white, sane and cleanly sort of brainy girl it came from. The other is long and narrow, and faintly scented—awfully feminine—making one see the easeful, lacy, charming, luxury-lapped girl it came from. One was probably rapped out on the typewriter at 8:30 a. m. The other was scrawled in bed on a silken knee at 10:30 a. m., with her chocolate tray just finished beside her. One girl had just covered a mile, more or less, of city streets on a stout pair of pumps. The other had maybe covered the space of velvet carpet between bed and window on a pair of Oriental "mules" with pink heels bare. One little chuckle I can get in here: The busy feet in the pumps and the lazy ones in the mules are just alike—the busy ones just as pink and white and kissable as ever the others are!

The square white letter says—courteously and appealingly—"Make if you please once, not the splendid creature of leisure and plenty, but just the plain business girl! There are a lot of us, you know."

The narrow gray letter says, "Make, if you please, a fussy creature who finds life a thing of rosy dawn, and who sometimes wishes she had—A JOB! There are a lot of us, you know!"

Here they are. Both together!

Little Bobbie's Pa

PA took Ma & me to a county fair day beefoar yesterday. Pa pritty neerly got arrested, but he was lucky & got away.

Pa was telling us how he used to be a grate favorit with the farmers wen he was yung & went to the county fairs back hoam. I was always in grate demand to be a judge, Pa sed, & wen I wasn't a judge of the races, I was judging babies & punkins & horses & cows. I offen look back & wonder, Pa, sed, how them simpel farmers got along at thare county fairs without me.

Ma looked at me & winked. Me & Ma is so used to heering Pa talk that way that nothing wich he says any moar maiks us taik any notis. But we was very glad he asked us to go to the fair, so we all went.

Rite after we got in the grounds, Pa found a old frend of his that owns a big farm. Come on oaver to this booth, he sed to Pa, & bring yure fambly. I want you to taste sum cider wich I have thare.

Ma & me tasted it, but it was awful sour, it tasted like vinnegar, so we didect taste any moar, but Pa & his frend kep drinking it. This is pretty hard stuff, isent it, sed Pa's frend. It mite be for you, sed Pa, but it isent hard for me. In my day, Pa sed, I have drank so much of everything that a littel harmless appel juice isent going to send me to the clover.

You better be careful, deer, sed Ma. My father used to have sum hard cider at hoam in Colfax that was worse than alkohol. He got two deekuns & the minister full one nite at a church sosbubal, Ma sed.

I aint any deekun or minister, Pa sed. I am a hero. Give us another, Pa sed.

THEY STAYED

Ma & me went around & looked at all the horses and cows & we had a ride on the merry go round & saw a horse race, & wen we caim back thare was Pa & his frend, rite at the saim booth & each of them with a dipper of the hard cider.

This is a glorus day, Pa was saying, & this hard cider is glorus. Look at that queen that jest went past, she smiled at me, sed Pa. Did she, sed Ma, you didont know Bobbie & I was here, did you? Did she smile at you?

She must have been laffing at me, sed Pa. I suppose I do look kind of warm & mussed up.

Well, sed Ma, wenever you think you have had enuff of yure frend's appel juice, we better go oaver to the grand stand & see the next race. There is going to be three grate trotters in it.

All rite, all of us will go, sed Pa. I am a grate judge of horseflesh, Pa sed. Lead me to yure grate trotters. I will tell you wether thay are grate or not if you lead me to them.

If you doant put away that dipper you will have to be led, sed Ma. Cum on, deer. There are other things in this world than appel cider.

So we all went oaver to the grand stand & Pa showed the farmer at the gate his card. I doant want to buy eny cards, sed the farmer. I newer carry them.

I am not selling cards sed Pa. You do not understand me. This is my naim. I used to be considered one of the gratest race judges in the country. I want to judge this race.

Git out of here or I will run you in, sed the farmer. I am a deputy sheriff. My naim is Harry Misner & I will pinch you, by heck.

You wont pinch me, sed Pa. One moar word from you & I will muss up yure kisser, Pa sed.

Lissen here, my deer cider feend, sed Ma to Pa. You & I & littel Bobbie will walk our way by eesy stages oaver to the auto wich we caim here in, we will go right hoam. There will be no war today.

On the way hoam Ma kept telling me nevver to drink hard cider wen I grow up. Ma toald me anybody that drank hard cider had a soft hed.

Beatrice Fairfax On:—

The Plight of Freckles

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

"I AM twenty-five years of age," writes a girl who signs herself by the descriptive name of "Freckles," a name that speaks for itself, "and am deeply in love with a young man six years my junior with whom I have kept company for the past five months. He claims he loves me, but when we attend a dance or party he seems to pay more attention to the younger girls. Do you think he really cares for me?"

Older women than Freckles, those who have known more of love's sweetness and more of its bitterness, and to whom Man is no problem, but something to be read as easily as a printed page, will say wisely, "He is beginning too soon."

That the man who loves a woman some years his senior begins at some time to think he has wasted the bloom of his youth on an "old woman," is inevitable; she may be only a few years his senior, but the marks of time are so much more apparent on her face and form than on his that he feels justified in calling her old at an age he will think is young when he has reached it.

HE IS UNJUST

So prone is man in this injustice that the wife who is the junior is made to feel with the years that she is too old for her husband. The man who is true in his thoughts, as well as his actions, to the wife who has grown old in his service, is the exception and not the rule.

Freckles, who is twenty-five and a woman grown, loves a boy of nineteen, and he says he loves her. He doesn't know what love is. At his age it is the flattered pleasure a boy feels at having attracted the love of a woman who is older. It is the love of the boy for his school teacher told over again, and it is an injustice to him, as well as to herself, to accept his stammered expressions of admiration as serious avowals.

Women do it, however, every day. Some because they love Love, and will welcome his messenger though he come in swaddling clothes. Others, because their charms attract only the impulsive and impressionable. Others through motives that are mercenary, for behind the young boy there stands a wealthy father, and others, like Freckles, who love, taking no heed of age, and discover to their cost some day that this is a matter of which the man always takes heed, sooner or later.

The boy Freckles loves is already beginning to wander. "When at a dance or party, he pays more attention to the younger girls." If he does this in the first blush of his love, it is dreary to contemplate what he will do when that love has grown cold. When Freckles, for instance, is forty-one, and struggling painfully against wrinkles, a double-decked chin, and a waist that moves steadily up, her husband will be thirty-five, as young as he ever was. And if the years have brought him prosperity, awakened his intelligence, and quickened his brain as they should, he is very much better looking than he was when a callow youth of nineteen.

NO LIMIT

My dear girl, I fear that tests of the tendencies of his youthful love making are a criterion, he will not limit his gallantry to "the younger girls" whom he casually meets them at a dance or a party. I am sorely afraid, my dear, that like many men he will forget your love, your devotion, your constancy, and the untiring efforts you have made all these years to add to his comfort and further his prosperity. He will forget all these in some young girl whose smile is directed at the bank account you have helped to accumulate. Your labor, your sacrifices, in those tragic days will become to him more an irritation than an obligation.

Give him up, Freckles! He is too young for you. He is too young for any woman. I want you to know the love of a MAN. I want you to receive a measure as full as you give. A man's heart to match your woman's, and not the petulant, wilful, changeable love of a boy.

HER SOLDIER DAD

Mrs. Johnson was all excitement. Her husband was a Gordon Highlander, and she had an invitation to visit him in barracks in Scotland.

"You'll soon see daddy now," she said to her six-year-old little daughter as the express bore them to their destination.

On arrival at the barracks Mrs. Johnson was informed that her husband was on sentry duty. One of the soldiers pointed him out to her, but, of course, they could not approach him. The child eyed her daddy with big round eyes full of wonder as he paced up and down the square, rifle on shoulder, in his regimental kilt.

"There's daddy!" cried the mother.

The child, however, was too lost in this amazing spectacle to answer, but at last it came out.

"Mamma," she said, in a childish treble, but with a strictly confidential air, "if daddy finds the man who stole his trousers will he give me that fickle frock?"

An Equine Scarecrow.

A prosperous farmer, who had gained the reputation of being exceedingly stingy, owned an old horse which was very thin and, as if to make up for the lack of flesh on its body the animal had an abnormally large head.

One day the farmer went to the expense of a new collar for the animal, but a very few minutes after the delivery of the collar he was back at the saddler's with it.

"Don't you know nuthin'?" he blurted out. "You've made it too small. I can't get it over his head!"

"Over his head?" said the saddler. "Man alive, it wasn't made to go over his head. Back him into it!"

She Knew Him

"Well," said he, anxious to make up their quarrel of yesterday, "aren't you curious to know what's in this parcel?"

"Not very," replied his wife, indifferently.

"Well, it's something for the one I love best in the world."

"Ah, I suppose it's those new collars you said you needed."

Quite Diffefrent

"This magazine looks the worse for wear!"

"Yes; it's the one I lend to the servant on Sundays."

"Doesn't she get tired of always reading the same one?"

"No; its the same book, but it's always a different servant."

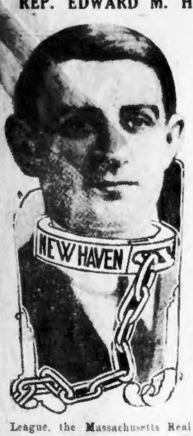
REP. EDWARD M. HALL OF PITTSFIELD



This is a Democratic Representative who does not feel any obligation toward the people who elected him. In spite of his own party platform which said: "WE ARE OPPOSED TO THE OWNERSHIP AND CONTROL OF OUR STREET RAILWAYS BY STEAM RAILROADS, AND WE BELIEVE THAT IT SHOULD GO NO FARTHER IN THIS COMMONWEALTH." Mr. Hall voted for the Western Trolley Merger Bill, which gave the New Haven Railroad Trust control over the street railways in more than half the State.

This vote was in opposition to the Governor whom Mr. Hall's party elected and ignored the best railroad expert opinion in the State and county, such as the Tax Commissioner the Railroad Commission, the Public Franchise League, the Massachusetts Real Estate Exchange, the Boston Chamber of Commerce and the Interstate Commerce Commission.

David I. Walsh, the Democratic candidate for Governor, declares that the act of this man Hall is the highest form of political treason and that the law for which this man voted ought to be struck from the statute books.

Democrats, are you going to renominate this man and thus put him on the same ballot with Mr. Walsh and tie Mr. Walsh up with a railroad tool and put Mr. Walsh on the defensive in the campaign and keep him explaining and apologizing for his painful association with a man whom he regards as a party traitor?

American Citizens Are Slaughtered and the Civilized World Scoffs

Mexican authorities were asked to "investigate" the case of one hundred American refugees from Torreon, including women and children, who it was feared had fallen into the hands of rebels while proceeding overland from Saltillo. This "investigation" was to be made at the polite request of the American Embassy. A polite request is all that the American Embassy is permitted to make when American citizens in Mexico are threatened with the same dreadful fate that has befallen so many of their fellow-countrymen there.

A few Japanese are killed in China, and Japan demands an apology and full reparation. Japan is but a fraction of the size of China, yet such a demand promptly results in an apology and full reparation.

Americans are killed in Mexico, American women are outraged, and all the reparation our government extends is bland advice to those who have not yet been killed to leave the country if they are able to do so.

The case of the one hundred refugees who, it was thought, might be in the hands of murderous bandits proves that not all of them may be able to do so—alive.

The Democratic party is destroyed, and the very name American is disgraced by such pedagogic pusillanimity.

The comic papers of the world are making us the butt of their jokes. And, what is worse, hostile nations and inimical individuals are making us the object of their insults.

It is safe to pick on Americans. It is safe to kill Americans. It is particularly safe to murder and mutilate American women and children.

The American government has no concern for such things. Its pedagogue and its demagogue have no concern for anything but post-offices, political spoils and Carnegie pensions.

A United States Senator, living in a border State, and familiar with the indifference to the lives of Americans in Mexico—an indifference that apparently is shared alike in Mexico and Washington—said recently:

"A Mexican can kill an American in Mexico, or can commit worse outrages on Americans, but our government will not interfere unless while in the act he says: 'I am doing this solely because you are an American citizen.'

"And I am not at all sure," added the Senator, "that it would not be necessary for the Mexican to notify the Secretary of State that he committed his crime as an act of hostility against the United States government before we would bring ourselves to interfere with him."

Every day brings news of fresh and more terrible outrages, and still nothing is done.

The pedagogue lampooned by Punch must put his fanciful English theories into injurious operation. The demagogue must make his money-grubbing circus tour of the Chautauquas, as the Vorsiche Zeitung puts it.

Meanwhile American citizens are slaughtered, and the civilized world scoffs.

The AMERICAN Is Disappointed in Mr. Bird's Attitude Towards the Railroad Trust

Mr. Charles S. Bird, the Progressive leader in Massachusetts, declares that Mr. Walsh has gone off half cocked in advocating that the State should exercise its power, reserved under the Boston Railroad Holding Company Act, to take the control of the Boston & Maine Railroad trust.

This statement from Mr. Bird is a great surprise and disappointment to the AMERICAN. This newspaper had hoped that Mr. Bird and the Progressives of Massachusetts would avoid the blunders committed by their fellow Progressives in Maine. In the Pine Tree State the Progressives talked well, but when it came down to essentials they united with the reactionary dregs of the Republican party to drive out of the Governor's chair a progressive Governor like Plaisted and to put in Haines, who is so tied up with the New Haven Railroad trust that he declined to appoint a representative from Maine to the board which other New England Governors had organized to inquire into the railroad situation. They also helped to defeat Senator Gardner, who was at least as progressive as the best of them, and to put in his place a reactionary Republican who had nothing to recommend him but his wealth and who had spent years in Congress so insignificantly that old and prominent members of the House did not know even of his existence.

The career of the Progressives will be short in this Commonwealth if they fail to grapple with the essentials here. Talk is cheap when it is spent in advocating uniform labor laws throughout the country. No one takes any great responsibility upon himself to advocate this reform, because we have no control over the forty-seven other States in the Union and because we can all talk ourselves black in the face without anything being done.

But the New Haven Railroad situation in this Commonwealth is a real, palpable, concrete, pressing, threatening thing. It is a chief essential in our political and economic situation. If Mr. Bird and the Progressives are wrong on this issue, they are wrong at the bottom.

Mr. Bird says that the New Haven Railroad ought to be given a chance under the new management. What does Mr. Bird mean by new management? He is very ignorant of the railroad situation or he is not very frank in his statement. If it is ignorance, it is a greater ignorance on a pressing public question than Mr. Bird ought to display. There is no new management on the New Haven road, in the proper sense of the word. There has been no change of the management which has authority to change the policy of the railroad. Those who had control of this railroad and have brought our railroad system and New England into its miserable situation, STILL CONTROL IT.

The AMERICAN has said over and over again that the change from Mr. Mellen to Mr. Elliott was a MERE CHANGE OF AGENTS. This fact is made so plain by everything that has happened anywhere in relation to the New Haven Railroad and by the hearing now proceeding before the Public Service Commission that those who DO NOT see it simply WILL NOT see it. They are blind because they want to be. Mr. Bird says that this railroad ought to be given another chance with the Boston & Maine under Mr. Elliott. How does he like the exhibition which Mr. Elliott made before the Public Utilities Commission last week? Was Mr. Elliott any more willing to take the public into the confidence of his railroad than was Mr. Mellen when he was the titular head? Read the questions which Commissioner Anderson and Mr. Macleod addressed to him and then consider his answers.

When he was asked if the railroad intended to heed the advice of the Interstate Commerce Commission and get rid of its trolleys, he replied that he had not been president long enough to know what that policy was to be. Does anybody believe his statement? When he was asked what he thought of the terms of the loan, all of whose features no one, not even the directors of the New Haven, will now defend, he still pleaded ignorance and excused his ignorance on the ground that he had been president only a few days.

TECHNICALLY he spoke the truth, but SUBSTANTIALLY he DENIED the truth, for he has been here several months and he knows perfectly well what the policy of the railroad is to be. So does everybody else who is watching the situation, except, Mr. Bird.

We all know that the New Haven intends to hold on to every one of its monopolistic acquisitions until it is forced to relinquish them. If they can get the help of a few more men like Mr. Bird they will hold to them forever, and if they can deceive the New England public into giving them another respite every time they change their agents they will go on killing people and ruining business and corrupting legislators forever, because they can put in a new president every day, if necessary, to please good-natured gentlemen like Mr. Bird. Such a statement from Mr. Bird does not give evidence of the ruggedness essential in the leader of a new movement and so conspicuous in Mr. Roosevelt.

The AMERICAN hopes that Mr. Bird will revise his views or at least that he will not impose them upon the Progressive party.

THE GARRET

By WILLIAM F. KIRK

DUSTY and dingy, where small mice roam;
The highest room in a lowly home,
It knows no light save the light of day
When a fugitive sunbeam comes to play.
It knows no revel, no festival,
And is shunned alike by the great and small,
But up in the garret where Chatterton crept
Deathless genius has laughed and wept.
Up in the garret under the skies
The poet starves and the painter dies;
And the statelìest hall where royalty reigns
Is not so grand as the Room of Brains.

Character, Not Riches, Brings Happiness—No Poverty of the Purse Can Ever Make You Poor While You Have Love, Sympathy and Kindness in Your Heart.

By ELLA WHEELER WILCOX

Copyright, 1913, by the Star Company.

THE great need of the world is to have all classes come into an intimate understanding of one another.

The more we can do to refute that old statement that "one-half the world does not know how the other half lives" the better for the race.

"Happy as a queen" is a phrase often used.

Life of Royalty Far from Happy; Ask Those Who Know

But those who know the intimate lives of queens and kings know how far from happy they are.

Study their portraits and it will reveal much of the melancholy, the discontent, the selfishness or the dissatisfaction which pervades their minds and marks their features.

King George of England is doubtless one of the best men, one of the most kindly and unselfish kings who ever sat upon a throne.

But he does not look like a really happy man; he looks like a man conscious of his great obligations, troubled about many things, and under a continual nervous tension to keep his duties to the nation performed. Queen Mary has the same serious expression, and one who reads an account of their doings for a single month wonders how two not over-robust human beings can endure the constant mental and physical strain to which they are subjected.

When we look upon the outside of palaces and homes of millionaires, when we see the occupants whizzing by in motor cars, or when we read of their smart functions, and jewels and fine linen, we imagine they live the life of fairy princes and princesses.

But when we come to know the intimate facts of their lives we realize that happiness is not a matter of position, or place, or honors, or rank—nor of money. It is a matter of disposition, of character and of habit, of thought.

Discontented young working-women often indulge in bitter resentment toward the people of wealth and leisure.

I wish these young toilers might study the faces and hear the conversation of hundreds of women in fashionable homes and at fashionable resorts.

Restlessness, ennui, dissatisfaction and ingratitude distort many a lovely face and render beautiful costumes but a mockery.

I don't mean to say that this is true of all women of wealth.

What I mean to say is just this: As many people in the humble walks of life, toiling for their daily bread, find enjoyment as in the ranks of wealth and fashion.

It is a matter of character and disposition, not of money. One who travels to any extent is sure to arrive at this conclusion.

There is, indeed, greater dissatisfaction to be read in the faces of women in a hotel dining room at a seashore or mountain resort than in the faces of women who emerge from shops and factories at 6 o'clock in any of our large cities.

Yet the majority of these toilers regard the woman who can travel and wear fine garments as favored by the gods.

No woman is favored by the gods unless she has cultivated cheerfulness, appreciation, kindness and good will and sets forth each day determined to be happy and to make happiness for others.

Many a working girl could teach her wealthier sister how to enjoy life.

In no home of poverty did I ever see unhappiness so marked on the faces of an entire family as on one I saw at a hotel not many moons ago.

The mother's eyes were full of jealousy and ill-temper; the father's face was defiant and bitter with disappointment; the son was a dissipated wreck of manhood, the daughter a restless, irritable, fault-finding child of misfortune.

Yet there were millions of dollars being spent yearly for the "enjoyment" of this family.

There was no love, nor harmony, no good will, no gratitude to God or man in the hearts of these people.

Better a crust of bread and a cup of milk after a day of hard labor, and love in the household and hope in the heart, than such splendid misery.

The poverty of the heart is the worst poverty on earth. Remember that as you toil and pray for wealth.

If you can keep your heart rich with love, sympathy and kindness, hope and faith, then whatever you acquire of worldly wealth will increase your opportunities for enjoyment.

Wealth Alone Can Never Give Enjoyment or Happiness

But wealth alone can never give you enjoyment or happiness, and no poverty of the purse can make you poor while you have these qualities.

A good disposition is the only thing worth coveting, and that can be acquired.

LETTERS FROM AMERICAN READERS

PRAISE FOR NELL BRINKLEY

Editor BOSTON AMERICAN:

Dear Sir—Your illustration, "East and West," shows Nell Brinkley to be an artist of a very high order. It is impossible to pick a flaw in the smallest detail of these contrasted types, and the whole atmosphere and environment of each is perfect to the last degree. One is led to wonder what marvelous beauties would be added if produced in oil upon a canvas. The theme and the treatment are alike worthy of this greater reproduction. Interesting is her text that accompanies the print, and it is regrettable that so fine work as this picture should be upon the perishable paper of a daily sheet. Yours very truly,

BRAKEMAN'S RESPONSIBILITY

Editor BOSTON AMERICAN:

Dear sir—There is a lot of foolish talk about the prevalence of rear-end collisions on railroads. The most important man on a train, as trains are run nowadays in sections, is the rear brakeman. He has more responsibility than the conductor or engineer, under certain conditions. He should not be, as is the case many times, merely an ornament, but an experienced man, who has had experience on freight trains. When his train stops, he should get off and go back, and keep on going back with his day or night signals. He should not be afraid of missing his train, but depend on the train following to pick him up. Unless the rear brakeman follows these rules no automatic signals now in use can remedy the defects. The lives of the passengers depend on a rear brakeman who is keenly alive to his responsibility.

"BREAKING THEM UP."

Editor BOSTON AMERICAN:

Dear Sir—Stephen Jenkins, in "The Story of the Bronx" (Putnam's), page 235, states: "It is a curious fact that when this railroad (New York, New Haven & Hartford) first began to run its trains, the passengers were booked as in the days of the stage coaches, and the conductors were obliged to report the names of the passengers to the company."

Until the last wooden coach has been destroyed, either by wrecks due to bad signals, bad breaks, etc., or by a public that refuses to die a "New Haven" death, would it not be well to have a registry book at each station, in which "chance takers" can register the train they are taking opposite their names and addresses?

Some well-meaning Congressman wants all wooden coaches abandoned in five years. Why, bless his heart, there will be none on the New Haven in 1918, at the rate at which they are now "breaking them up."
